WASHINGTON CITY.

Our Navy.

Washington, Nov 29—The secretary of the navy, in his annual report, says that since his last report, the condition of the navy has been considerably improved. There are now in commission 28 cruising ships, one steam tug and five sailing vessels, all in condition for sea service except the Gettysburg. There are vessels, including one monitor, which will be ready for sea in a few months. Besides these, there are 13 needing more extensive repairs, but all can be put in thorough condition with present appropriations and those asked for the next fiscal year In case of necessity, 81 war vessels of all classes, including monitors, can be put in service from tables contained in the report the secretary says: It will be seen that the total expenses of the last fiscal year, including the amount appropriated for deficiencies of the previous year, were $17,468 392 After deducting deficiencies of 1877 and 1878, which were $4,161,478, the amount chargeable to expenditures of the year was $13 306 914, which was $1 199 less than the actual expenses of the previous year, and $4,928 077 less than the expenditures, including the deficiencies of that year, and $4,630,430 less than the expenditures of the year ending June 30th

An Army Man Speaks Plainly.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—The Tribune's Washington special says that Gen R. B Marcy, inspector general of the United States army has prepared a paper charging the Indian bureau with being thoroughly impregnated with corruption, and that any change would be an improvement. He denies that the Indian bureau tends to civilize, educate and Christianize the Indians. There is no progress to self support. Meanwhile agents have made fortunes out of $1,800 salaries. On the contrary, when the Indians were under the control of the war department, (from 1833 to 1849) there was no corruption. Annuities were honestly and honestly distributed The army does not desire the change, but it would be an economical measure and stop immense corruption and extravagance

Chicago, Nov. 29.—The Tribune's Washington special says: The proposition of Pacific coast politicians to open war upon the Chinese treaty brought up a new point in discussion, namely how far the position assumed by Secretary Evarts in his report regarding the conference of the local laws of Newfoundland with the fishery provisions of the treaty, apply to the local laws of California which are hostile to the Chinese, and in violation of the rights and protection granted by the treaty. Pacific coast men are particularly pleased with the logic of Evarts' position as applied to their case

REPORT OF SECRETARY SCHURZ

Indian Affairs

Washington Nov 29—Secretary Schurz in his report makes the following recommendations regarding Indian affairs

First an entirely satisfactory state of things can be brought about not only [illegible] cannot be [illegible] the Indian service alone If recurrence of trouble is to be avoided [illegible] must be liberal enough to be sufficient for that purpose and they [illegible] carrying [illegible] the year [illegible] delivery of new supplies [illegible] old are exhausted

Second the Indian service [illegible] dispose [illegible] proper accountability [illegible] agencies

Third citizens of the western states and territories must be made to understand that if the Indians are to cease to be troublesome paupers and vagabonds, and are to become orderly and self supporting they must have lands, etc for agriculture and pasturage that on such lands they must be permitted to reside and establish permanent homes and that such result cannot be attained if the white people insist upon taking from them by force or trickery every acre of ground that is good for anything

The first two things can be accomplished by appropriate action on the part of congress Difficulties growing out of continually reported encroachments by white people on the rights of the Indians may be lessened or entirely avoided by the most energetic enforcement of the law on the part of the general and local governments

To this end it seems desirable that southwestern tribes whose present reservations appear insecure or otherwise unsuitable for their permanent settlement should be gradually removed to the Indian territory The northwestern tribes will in the course of time have to be concentrated in a similar manner on a few reservations east of the Rocky mountains and on the Pacific slope

In regard to the outbreak of Bannocks last spring the secretary says

It must be admitted they were insufficiently supplied with food which however was owing to the appropriation of money by congress being utterly inadequate to their wants The money available for feeding them amounted only to [illegible] four and a half cents per head per day This created discontent among them When a murder of a white man was committed by an Indian the Indian was arrested tried and hung The discontent grew into excitement A military detachment attempted to disarm them but with only partial success and finally an outbreak took place

As regards the outbreak of 300 Northern Cheyennes the secretary corroborates statements heretofore made by the commissioner of Indian affairs in a special report on this subject showing that it was not caused by hunger or by any neglect on the part of government officials to furnish them supplies according to the treaty; but on the contrary they received ample supplies more than they were entitled to

Timber Lands.

Following is the full text of that part of the report of the secretary of the interior in which he comments on two acts passed last winter, authorizing citizens of Colorado Nevada and the territories to take timber from the public lands for mining and domestic purposes, and providing for the sale of timber lands in California, Nevada Oregon and Washington territory The secretary says

In the opinion of the commissioner of the general land office those two acts are more calculated to hasten destruction of forests in the states and territories named than to secure the preservation of them The commissioner of the general land office in an official letter to me expresses the following opinion of an act relating to Colorado Nevada and the territories

It is a fact well known that while almost all timber land in those states and in all the territories except Dakota and Washington is regarded as mineral, only a small portion is so in reality The effect of the bill will be to prevent the survey and sale of any timber on lands in the states and territories named, thus cutting off a large proportion of revenue It is equivalent to a donation of all the timber lands to the inhabitants of those states and territories which will be found to be the largest donation of the public domain hitherto made by congress The bill authorizes registers and receivers of land offices in districts in which the lands are situated to make an investigation without any specified directions from the secretary of the interior or the commissioner of the general land office to settle and adjust their own account and retain from the moneys coming into their hands arising from the sale of lands such amount as they may expend or cause to be expended This method will be found to be exceedingly expensive and will result in no good Experience has shown that the machinery of the land office is wholly inadequate to prevent depredation.

Secretary Schurz continues

The rules and regulations issued in pursuance of the first section of this act are to be found in the records of the general land office herewith presented These rules were drawn up with a view of preserving young timber and undergrowth upon the mineral lands of the United States, to the end that the mountain sides may not be left barren of timber and undergrowth necessary to prevent the precipitation of rainfall and melting snows in floods upon fertile, arable lands in the valleys below thus destroying agricultural and pasturage interests of mineral and mountainous portions of the country It was made the duty of registers and receivers to see that trespassers upon timber lands not mineral be reported, and that upon mineral lands alone, timber only of certain size be cut and that young trees and undergrowth be protected and that timber be cut only for the purposes mentioned in the act. These rules and regulations will be enforced with all the power left to this department in order to save what may be saved, But I deem it my duty to call attention to the fact as set forth by the commissioner in the letter above quoted The machinery of the land office is utterly inadequate to accomplish the object in view After a careful consideration of the above named act, and its probable effect, I venture the prediction that the permission of the inhabitants of the states and territory named therein to take timber from the public lands in any quantity and wherever they can find it for all purposes except for sale, will be taken advantage of, not only by settlers and miners but by persons who see in this donation a chance to make money quickly, and that it will stimulate wasteful consumption beyond actual need and lead to wanton destruction That the machinery left to this department to prevent and repress such waste and destruction through enforcement of the rules mentioned will prove entirely inadequate, and that as a final result, in a few years the mountain sides of these states and territories will be stripped bare of timber now growing upon them with no possibility of its reproduction the said timber being once cut off from the slopes Irreparable destruction of forests will bring upon those states all the calamities experienced from the same cause in districts in Europe and Asia similarly situated It appears to me therefore that a repeal of the above named act and substitution therefor of a law embodying a more provident policy, similar to the bill heretofore advocated, is in the highest degree desirable If the destruction of forests in these states be permitted, the agricultural and pasturage interests in mountainous regions will inevitably be sacrificed and the valleys will, in the course of time become unfit for the habitation of man.

The act for the sale of timber lands in the states of California Oregon, Nevada and in Washington territory, as passed by congress at its last session, is, in a letter on the files of the interior department, commented upon by the commissioner of the general land office as follows "It is a bill of local and not of general application to timber lands of the United States and adds one more to the special acts for the disposal of the public domain. The price fixed is too low, as much of the land is worth from $5 to $50 per acre Under the provision of the bill timber lands will, in my opinion be speedily taken up and pass into the hands of speculators notwithstanding the provisions to prevent such a result The soil should not be sold with the timber. Where land is not fit for cultivation only timber of a certain size should be sold, and young timber should be retained with a view to a reproduction of the forests The bill should have a limited sale of lands to persons who have farms and homes within a state or territory, and it ought to have required purchasers to show affirmatively that they had need of timber for domestic uses The last clause of the second section will permit any person on applying for a tract of timber land and securing a certificate from the register to sell his interest therein immediately, and the purchaser, although it may have been obtained by perjury, may be entitled to a patent for the land. Section five provides that any person prosecuted under section 461 of the revised statutes of the United States may be relieved [illegible] payment of $2 50 per acre [illegible] upon [illegible] for the reason that the penalty fixed is altogether made [illegible] does not require payment [illegible] cost of prosecution which are often [illegible] the penalty [illegible] should [illegible] the trespasser should pay for the [illegible] trespassed up [illegible] of this bill be [illegible] it will be [illegible] by per [illegible] timber [illegible] growth is rapid [illegible] such a result will [illegible] need not be [illegible]

Schurz adds

I fully concur with [illegible] of the general [illegible] expressed [illegible] tending to measures [illegible] department for [illegible] government [illegible] that [illegible] of lumbermen and [illegible] arrested in those [illegible] the proceedings of [illegible] of the department [illegible] were comp [illegible] other wise [illegible] careful inquiries into [illegible] inquiries resulted [illegible] cation of agents [illegible] was found that private [illegible] with timber [illegible] or with lumber [illegible] was sometimes [illegible] was ordered [illegible] to arrest wanton [illegible] the mountains [illegible] inflicted great hardships upon settlers there But there is information in the possession of this department showing that no such hardships resulted from the measures taken that the price of firewood remained the same that settlers were not hindered in providing for their actual necessities and that the measures of the department were directed only against a class of persons who made an unlawful taking and selling of timber from public lands in large quantities a regular business and a source of profit to themselves We cannot close our eyes to the fact that anything like complete success in suppressing unlawful practices is impossible unless the efforts made by this department for the protection of the public property meet with hearty co operation on the part of the legislative branch of the government Actual experience enables me to say that the want of such co operation has been and will always be an encouragement to depredators to persist in their lawlessness and to defy the authorities

The secretary expresses his opinion that the disastrous consequences which always follow the destruction of the forests of a country will inevitably come upon us in a comparatively short period of time considering the rapidity with which the timber growth of the country is being swept away unless legislation is enacted to arrest this indiscriminate spoliation To that end he earnestly renews his recommendation for the passage of a bill, already introduced in congress at his suggestion which provides that all timber bearing lands, chiefly valuable for the timber upon them shall be withdrawn from sale or other disposition under existing laws to be held by government with a view to preventing indiscriminate destruction and waste and to the preservation of young timber and reproduction of the forests The bill provides ample means by which settlers on public lands and miners can procure timber and firewood to supply their wants with or without sale, at minimum rates It also provides for the sale of timber at reasonable prices for manufacturing purposes and for export and for the appointment of a number of officers to execute its provisions under the direction of the interior department

Montreal Receives the Big Bugs

Montreal Nov 29—The streets which a light frost has made passable are crowded The decorations are magnificent The public buildings will be brilliantly illuminated this evening and stores and residences have tasteful transparencies with appropriate mottoes. Although the vice regal train was not expected till 1 o'clock, holders of tickets giving admission to the railroad depot, were taking their places at 11 o'clock. As early as 11 30, the route of procession was densely packed, people growing in enthusiasm with the approach of the hour of arrival At 12 20 the governor's train made its appearance.

Montreal, Nov 29—At the appointed hour the vice royal train swept into the Bonaventura depot where was assembled the elite of the city to the number of between three and four thousand in full dress and wearing rosettes with the mayor in the scarlet robes of office at their head

As the governor general and the princess approached the throne they were met by the mayor who presented the princess with a magnificent bouquet Their excellencies immediately ascended the throne when the mayor read the address of the corporation to Lorne At the conclusion of the speech the mayor presented members of the corporation, with two chief officers of the city, the clerk and recorder, all of whom paid respects to the marquis and princess The only additional presentation was that of Bishop Faber, who was cordially received by their excellencies At 1 o clock the doors were opened and the vice regal party left the dais and passed out through files of soldiers to carriages The procession, which was headed by the corporation, then started, the Montreal troop of cavalry following the carriage of the vice regal party As they emerged from the gate of the depot the orphans belonging to the Roman Catholics who were in a building opposite, sang the national anthem Bonaventura street probably the poorest in point of architecture in the city was made to look gay and attractive by profuse decorations of flags. There was a dense mass collected on the street, an avenue for the procession being with difficulty obtained As the marquis with the princess passed the cheering was immense In Victoria square, Randegond street Beaver Hall and Dorchester street, right to the doors of Windsor Hotel, there was an uninterrupted mass of people, while the windows as well as roofs of the houses were crowded with shouting loyal subjects At intervals along the route various regiments of military were placed, and as the governor general passed he received the military salute When passing Bonaventura street countless flowers were poured down upon the vice regal party amid the loud cheers of the multitude This arch the most attractive erected, had battlements painted in imitation of stone, which contrasted exquisitely with its wide expanse of green and gold Over the center was emblazoned Welcome.

This is the Usual Way.

From the Omaha Evening News.]

It is an open secret in the city of Omaha that, with a very few notable and honorable exceptions, including our home member of the commission, the senators and representatives were gloriously and uproariously drunk. It is a fact that the commissioners did not attend to the business which they were paid to attend to—that they traveled through to San Francisco in post haste, merely bent on what the boys would call a "high old time," without taking the trouble to investigate the Indian question in any way but superficially It is a fact that the whole history of their travel has been the history of a carouse.

New discoveries of gold have been made in Siberia, near the source of the Konnisar, and a nugget of gold weighing 147 pounds, the largest ever discovered in Russia and probably in the world, has been found on the banks of the Upper Toungouska, about 100 versts above the river's mouth by drawing out the amount—in bank notes He is probably a lineal descendant of the Irishman who desiring to be revenged on an unpopular banker, bought up and destroyed his notes. One very comical incident is reported. A man who had a deposit in the local branch of a Manchester bank hastily withdrew the amount and posted to Manchester, where he deposited it in the head office of the same bank His explanation was that he thought the small banks would "go first."

WASHINGTON TERRITORY

The steamboat race for $500 a side is announced to take place on the Sound [illegible]

The tugboat Politkofsky, property of the Port Madison Mill Co has been attached by the creditors of her owners

The wrecked barkentine J. Bar lying at Madison has been surveyed by the underwriters and condemned She will soon be sold Her insurance amounted to $8 000

It has been stated hitherto that Charles H Montgomery (Rep) was elected to the territorial council from Columbia Whitman and Stevens Full returns however show that his competitor Ruger of Almota is elected by four majority

Never before has the Puget Sound country generally speaking, been so surfeited with produce as this season especially in the line of hay and feed The bulk of this has been accumulating for several years past, such accumulation having been rendered possible in the absence of cold winters

The Ladies Guild of St Lukes church in Vancouver have succeeded during one year and a half in clearing up the entire church debt the last of which was paid this week In this affair women's rights got away with men's means in a very practicable way and may they ever thus prevail

The amount of freight which is brought to this city daily by the little steamers plying between here and Washington territory is enormous An average cargo consists of potatoes hay in bales live stock dressed beef, pork veal venison live chickens, butter eggs cabbages etc This shows that Clarke county farmers are not idle by any means

Capt Paul Corno well known in Portland and Astoria died at Tillamook on Thursday of last week He was 60 years of age He was a Mason of high degree and was buried with the honors of that order

DECISION IN THE U S CIRCUIT COURT DEADY J

U S Circuit Court—District of Oregon

MONDAY November 25 1878

H B N [illegible] v Jan W [illegible] et al—Suit in Equity

[illegible] for want of equity within [illegible] substance a bond [illegible] jurisdiction of the court—[illegible] cannot be [illegible] in that suit

SAME A demurrer that [illegible] facts sufficient to constitute a cause [illegible] known to the equity practice [illegible] ing more than the general demurrer for want of equity

[illegible] in which the plaintiff [illegible] assignee [illegible] must be made by plea and not by demurrer

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES [illegible] by an assignee [illegible] to set aside a fraudulent conveyance made by the bankrupt after his discharge of property concealed [illegible] thereto is not [illegible] to annul such [illegible] discharge and may therefore be brought in the circuit court

LIMITATION—such suit may be brought at any time within two years from the discovery of the fraud by the assignee or those whom he represents

ANNULLING A DISCHARGE—The district court which granted a discharge alone has jurisdiction of a proceeding to annul it and [illegible] that such proceeding must be brought by the creditor and may be brought at any time within two years from the discovery of the fraud [illegible] it is sought to be set aside

LIMITATION—PROOF OF DEBTS The statute of limitations of the state where the bankrupt resides, applies to the proof of debts against his estate and such statute continues to run against such debts after the adjudication in bankruptcy and therefore no claim can be proven or enforced against such estate [illegible] in the [illegible] of such [illegible]

ESTATE OF BANKRUPT—FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE The estate of a bankrupt after satisfying the valid claims against it belongs to the bankrupt and therefore a conveyance by him alleged to be fraudulent as against creditors will not be set aside [illegible] suit by the assignee where it appear that there are no debts provable against the estate

DEADY J

This suit was brought on May [illegible] to have a discharge in bankruptcy heretofore granted to the defendant Murray declared fraudulent and void and to have certain conveyances of lots 1, 2 and [illegible] in block [illegible] in Caruthers addition to Portland set aside as being made to defraud the creditors of said bankrupt

The material facts stated in the Bill are, that on June 6 1868 the defendant Murray was duly adjudged a bankrupt in the district court of this district upon his own petition filed therein on May [illegible] 1868 that an assignee of his estate was appointed and acted as such until his discharge on April [illegible] 187 and that on [illegible] Murray fraudulently procured his discharge in bankruptcy that it appeared from the schedule of said bankrupt that his assets amounted in value to only $ 35 all of which was set apart to him as exempt and that his creditors were four in number—three of whom resided in San Francisco and one in Missouri—that these debts aggregated $ 46 and arose upon simple contract $4000 of which was contracted in Missouri and became due not later than January 1861, the remainder—$1 41—being contracted in California and coming due not later than August 186 that the California creditors relying upon the statement in said schedule from which it appeared there were no assets applicable to the payment of claims against the estate failed to prove their debts that the debt stated to be due the Missouri creditor was not proven and is false and fictitious that at and before the filing of the petition aforesaid the bankrupt was the owner of the premises aforesaid and during the year 1867 erected a dwelling thereon but fraudulently omitted the same from his schedule that the legal title thereto was in a third person who held the same in trust for the bankrupt and with intent to defraud the creditors of the latter that on July 13 1869 said third person conveyed the premises to the bankrupt who continued to hold the property in his own name until February 4 1878 when he conveyed the same to his co-defendant without any or upon a grossly inadequate consideration, with intent to defraud his creditors and that said defendant now holds the same in trust for the bankrupt and with intent to defraud the creditors of the latter, and that none of said California creditors nor said assignee ever knew or became aware of the alleged fraud concerning said property until Dec [illegible] 187

The defendants demur to the bill separately but allege the like causes of demurrer

The first cause is the general one that the complainant has not made out a case which entitles him to any relief and the second is like unto it—that the bill does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of suit But there is no such defect or insufficiency in the substance of this case as will sustain a demurrer for want of equity On the contrary the case made by the bill is one of a gross and palpable fraud, against which the complainant is entitled to have the relief prayed for unless for some special and technical cause—as the lapse of time, a mistake in the forum or the like this suit cannot be maintained The second cause is borrowed from the Code practice but I believe is unknown to equity pleading So far as it has any significance it amounts to an allegation that there is no equity in the bill and in effect is the equivalent of the first cause They are neither well taken and are both overruled

The third and seventh causes are substantially the same and are both to the effect that the complainant is not entitled to sue because he does not really sustain the character he pretends to—that is he is not the lawful assignee of the estate of Murray But the complainant is described in the bill as the assignee of the estate and that is sufficient on demurrer both at law and in equity If the defendants wish to contest the right of the complainant to sue in the character assumed—as the assignee of Murray's estate—he must make the objection by plea denying the right The case is like the one where a party sues as administrator The defendant cannot assume that the complainant is not a lawful administrator and question his right to sue in that character by demurrer but he must make the objection by a plea of ne unques administrator Story's Eq Plea [illegible] Chit Plead [illegible] Curt Eq Prac [illegible] Neither is the demurrer well taken so far as these causes are concerned

The sixth cause of demurrer is that this court has no jurisdiction to hear the cause or grant the relief prayed for This is sufficient as a special demurrer, because it does not give any reason why this court is without jurisdiction But on the argument the ground of the objection was disclosed, as follows This is a suit among other things to annul the bankrupt (Murray's) discharge upon the ground of fraud in obtaining it, and no court has jurisdiction of that matter but the district court that granted it

The argument is that as by § [illegible] of the R S a discharge in bankruptcy subject to certain exceptions of which this case is not one shall release the bankrupt from all debts claims liabilities and demands which were or might have been proved against the estate in bankruptcy and as by § 5 1 0 of the R S provision is made, that any creditor who desires to contest the validity of the discharge on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained may at any time within two years after the date thereof apply to the court which granted it to annul the same it follows that no one but a creditor can maintain a proceeding to annul a discharge and that no court but the court which granted it has jurisdiction of the same [illegible] really speaking this is not a proceeding to annul a discharge but simply to set aside certain fraudulent conveyances whereby the property of the bankrupt has been and now is covered up and prevented from coming to the hands of his assignee and that the bankrupt is made a party to the suit not for the purpose of affecting in any manner his discharge or establishing or enforcing any claim against him personally but to relieve the property which rightfully belongs to his assignee from the effects of the fraudulent conveyances received and made by him since the date of the discharge

There is no doubt but that a direct proceeding to annul a discharge must be brought in the district court which granted it and the better opinion seems to be that it cannot be attacked or called in question otherwise or elsewhere (May v Howe 4 B R 677 S C 108 Mass. 502 Contra Perkins v Gay 3 B R 772) It may be also that such suit must be brought by a creditor in person and not by his representative the assignee But whether the limitation of two years within which such proceeding may be brought is to be counted from the date of the discharge or the discovery of the fraud on account of which it is sought to set it aside is a question upon which my mind in the light of Bailey v Glover 21 Wall 346 inclines to the latter view

Apart then, from the question—is this a suit to annul a discharge there is no doubt of the jurisdiction of the court to hear the cause and grant the relief The suit is one by the assignee against the defendant claiming an adverse interest, "touching certain property * * * of the bankrupt transferable to or vested in the assignee," and jurisdiction of it is expressly conferred upon this court by § 4979 of the R S It is not barred by the limitation of two years prescribed by § 5057 because it is alleged in the bill that the fraud was not discovered by the complainant or the former assignee or any of the creditors until December, 1877 and in Bailey v Glover supra the supreme court held that the general principle applies to this limitation so that where the suit is intended to obtain redress against a fraud concealed by the party, or which from its nature remains secret the statute does not begin to run until the fraud is discovered by or becomes known to the party suing or those in privity with him The same ruling was made by Mr Justice Curtis in Carr v Hilton 1 Curt 3 upon a similar limitation contained in § 8 of the bankrupt act of 1841 and this agrees with the rule prescribed by the law of this state in case of fraud and mistake (Or Civ Code § 3)

My best impression is that this suit [illegible] not the bankrupt's discharge and that so far this court has jurisdiction of it [illegible] it is not [illegible] that he is a necessary party to the suit The only relief that can be obtained against him is a discovery The remaining relief—the conveyance of the property to the assignee or the setting aside of the fraudulent deeds—is sought only against his co-defendant in whom the title to the premises is now vested by the wrongful act of the bankrupt Suppose for instance that after the bankrupt's discharge he should receive a [illegible] [illegible] adjudged a bankrupt [illegible] should unlawfully [illegible] [illegible] compel a conveyance or delivery of this property [illegible] according to all the [illegible] and the bankrupt [illegible] The discharge relates back to the filing of the petition [illegible] and suffered by him [illegible] assignee or creditors [illegible] In this case the bankrupt after his discharge wrongfully took the title to the property well knowing it to belong to his estate in bankruptcy and with the like knowledge and the intent to defraud his creditors subsequently conveyed to his co-defendant and his discharge which is a [illegible] against any debt due [illegible] or liability existing at the time of the [illegible] no defence to any proceeding on this account

The fourth cause of demurrer is that this suit was not commenced within two years from the date of the bankrupt's discharge This of course assumes that this is a suit to annul the discharge and that the statute commenced to run from the date of the discharge whether the fraud was then discovered or not Both these assumptions are I think incorrect The demurrer as to this and the sixth cause is not well taken

The fifth and last cause of demurrer is that it appears from the bill that the claims of the creditors mentioned therein were barred by the statute of limitations before the commencement of this suit

In the consideration of this question I think it must be taken to granted that there are no other creditors of the bankrupt than those named in his schedule and mentioned in the bill There is no allegation in the bill that there are any other creditors It must also be admitted that all these claims though not barred by the statute of limitations of Oregon at the date of the adjudication were so barred before the commencement of this suit—the causes of action arising thereon having accrued more than six years prior thereto (Or Civ Code §)

The question what effect have the statutes of limitations of the several states upon the proof of debts in bankruptcy has not been passed upon by the supreme court and the decisions of the lower courts upon the matter are conflicting

In re Ray 1 B R 203 Judge Blatchford held that a debt although barred by the statute of the state in which the debt arose [illegible] was provable in bankruptcy unless barred through it the United States

In re Sheppard Id 416 Judge Hall held that a debt against which the statute of limitations of the state had run was nevertheless a debt [illegible] might be provided and allowed in bankruptcy for the reason that there was no statute of limitations of the United States which prevented it On the other hand In re Kingsley 1 B R Judge Lowell held that a debt barred by the statute of the state where the debtor resides cannot be proved against his estate in bankruptcy which agrees with the English rule Ex parte Dewdney 15 Ves

In re Hardin 1 B R 0 Judge Fox made the same ruling In re Reed in Pitts [illegible] Judge [illegible] held that the defense of the statute of limitations might be made to a claim [illegible] a creditor seeking to prove his debt in bankruptcy whenever that defense might be made in a suit in the state where the debtor resides [illegible] Judge Deady held that a debt barred by the statute of W [illegible] could not be proved [illegible] In re Cornwall [illegible] Woolf held that the courts of the United States when sitting as courts of bankruptcy were as much bound by the statutes of limitation of the state in which they sit as in ordinary cases and therefore a debt barred by the statute of New York was not provable therein in bankruptcy

From this summary of [illegible] it will be seen that the decided weight of authority is in favor of the application of the statute of limitations to claims in bankruptcy and in my judgment that of reason also Doubtless congress might have established a uniform rule of limitation as to the proof of debts in bankruptcy as it may do in regard to proceedings in the national courts generally [illegible] Harmon 3 B R 2 7 But it has not done so and the inference therefrom is strong and convincing that it was the intention to leave the matter to be governed by the local law This is more evident from the fact that if a claim is contested upon the proof an appeal lies to the circuit court—§ 4981 R S—where the claim must be declared upon and tried as in an action at law In such a case the court would be bound [illegible] to give effect to the statute of limitations of the state and if the claim was barred by such statute the creditor could not recover It can hardly be supposed that congress intended that the state statute of limitation should be applicable to the claim on the trial in the circuit court and not so in making proof of it in the district court

My conclusion is that the statute of limitations of the state where the debtor is adjudged a bankrupt applies to all debts due from the bankrupt with the same effect as if the claim was then sued upon in the state court

The next question is if a claim is not barred when the petition in bankruptcy is filed does the statute of limitations continue to run against it thereafter, or may it be proven at any time after the adjudication although the period prescribed by the statute as a bar to an action thereon has elapsed

In re Eldridge 12 B R 540, Judge Hughes held, that the statute ceases to run from the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy and if a debt is not then barred it may be proven at any time afterward In support of this ruling the case of ex parte Ross [illegible] Glynn & Jam [illegible] and cases arising under the Massachusetts insolvent law were cited In ex parte Ross [illegible] the commission issued in 1810 and the debt was due in the same year On an application to prove the debt in 18 , and an objection that six years had elapsed the vice chancellor held that the statute did not run against a creditor after a commission is sued that the commission was a trust for the benefit of all the creditors and the statute never ran against a trust and upon appeal to the lord chancellor this ruling was affirmed The case in re Eldridge is the only one I have found in the National [illegible] upon the point

I am not satisfied with the doctrine of this case It seems to me it avoids in a great measure the rule that the local statute of limitations shall govern But for the adjudication in bankruptcy these claims would all have been barred before 1875 And yet this adjudication in no way hindered the creditors from proving these claims in the court of bankruptcy before the expiration of six years from their maturity and thus have prevented the bar of the statute from attaching to them The bar of the statute is founded upon the presumption of payment from the lapse of time and there is as much reason in presuming payment or satisfaction of a debt maturing after the bankruptcy of the debtor as before Both on the ground of public convenience and private security the presumption ought to prevail in the one case as well as the other The notion that the estate becomes a trust fund in the hands of the assignee and therefore the statute of limitations ceases to run against an unproved and unknown claim upon such fund seems to rest upon a mistaken analogy True, the assignee may be called a trustee by operation of law—in invitum—to distribute the estate according to law that is to pay the valid subsisting claims as far as the assets will permit and to pay over the residue, if any, to the bankrupt But between the assignee and the creditor whether known to the assignee as such or not a creditor [illegible] between whom and the assignee there is the relation of personal trust and confidence that prevents any presumption arising to the prejudice of the former from mere lapse of time On the contrary there is no actual trust and confidence between the parties—prior at least to the proof and allowance of the creditors demand and therefore it cannot be that by reason of the adjudication in bankruptcy his claim is exempt from the ordinary law of proof and presumption but may be dug up at any time and proved against the estate when in the common course of affairs the evidence of its payment or illegality is lost or forgotten I do not forget in this connection that the debts in question are upon the bankrupt's schedules But the doctrine that there is an actual trust between the assignee and each creditor and therefore the statute of limitations does not run against the latter after an adjudication in bankruptcy applies if at all to debts off the schedules as well as those upon them Neither is the mere fact that a claim is mentioned in the schedules any sufficient security against the danger of delay in making proof thereof The claim although upon the schedules may not be valid as against the other creditors if at all Indeed in this very case it is alleged in the bill that the principal debt named in the bankrupt's schedule is fictitious and fraudulent

An assignee like an administrator is really the officer or agent of the law to distribute the estate among those legally entitled to it Each creditor is interested in preventing the allowance of illegal claims—claims which could not be collected by the ordinary process of law

The statute—§ 5067 R S —provides, that All debts due and payable from the bankrupt at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy and all debts then existing but not payable until a future day * * * may be proved against the estate of the bankrupt"

It must be admitted that this language taken literally and alone, would permit the proof of these debts. There is no limitation in the statute upon the time of making the proof But it must be construed with reference to existing laws upon the subject of "debts due and payable"—among others the local statute of limitations Considered in this connection, a simple contract debt after six years from maturity, being no longer a debt due or payable the statute must be construed as if it read— may be proved against the estate of the bankrupt if done so before the lapse of time has raised the presumption of their payment or satisfaction

Of course a case may arise where the limitation upon the proof of the claim would expire between the filing of the petition and the adjudication in bankruptcy in which event it might be necessary to hold that this period should not be counted in the limitation or that the creditor should have some reasonable time after notice of the adjudication to make his proof Indeed this is a proper subject of legislation and the bankrupt act should have contained a provision covering the whole subject of limitation upon the proof of debts and [illegible] the courts by means of [illegible] profitless litigation

Having [illegible] the conclusion that the debts [illegible] proven against the [illegible] bankrupt it follows that this suit [illegible]

[illegible] the character of the transactions complained of [illegible] this [illegible] as assignee represents [illegible] which [illegible] The [illegible] after the payment of all valid debts belongs to the bankrupt [illegible]

To grant the relief prayed [illegible] then [illegible] there are any debts [illegible] proven against the estate and [illegible] was given to the assignee [illegible] to reconvey it to the bankrupt

[S]ATURDAY MORNING NOV [illegible]0 1878

THE ABORTIVE BERLIN TREATY

[illegible] ADMISSIONS OF AN ENGLISH JOURNAL—WHAT IS TO BE DONE?—DANGER [illegible]—[illegible] OF WAR—DIDN'T WE TELL YOU

From the London Pall Mall Gazette

When now we look to India on the one and to Turkey on the other and then to the desperately aggressive spirit displayed by Russia in both regions we feel that it is hardly needful to prove the truth of the course of our arguments and predictions in dealing with the great [illegible] question. We have no longer to wait for the issue of events. Facts have decided and decided [illegible] they decide that all [illegible] and expectations all the confident assurances [illegible] of those whose business it was to [illegible] for the country and [illegible] for [illegible] have been utterly falsified and turned to naught. The Berlin treaty has already broken down there is no peace yet and they who were most confident that peace was secured at Berlin (for twenty years—that is to be about the period) are now most apprehensive of immediate war in two or three places at once. And undoubtedly we have much more reason for their fears than ever they had for their hopes. It is positively could not agree with them in their painfully ridiculous triumphant mood, of [illegible] shame and a humiliation so now our apprehensions fall short of theirs. The war may break out anew and take a far wider range, and so it will if affairs are allowed to drift any further by a government in awe of its responsibilities at variance as to its moral as well as its political duties and which is more perhaps shy of doing anything that would imply acknowledgment that its judgments were fallacious, its hopes illusions and its triumphs absurd. It must be allowed that any such feeling of shyness would be extremely natural—that any such acknowledgment of error would be in a certain sense sacrificing.

WHAT THE MINISTRY SHOULD DO

But the ministry may be fairly expected to make some sacrifice in atonement for their grievous mistakes, and in choosing to take the punishment in that form they will surely take the least that lies before them. It is what they want they must choose the measures than those which not only proved abortive, but have actually led to one of the cost and consequences of which it is impossible to foretell and have [illegible] us with the danger of another and more ruinous conflict. This must be commanded by commanding [illegible] of the reckless power which has kept Europe in commotion for years past and now threatens to break away from all law and all restraint. If this is only to be done in concert still, and if concert is a give and take matter for the benefits of which all parties must pay something it follows that we should not shrink from any price in reason.

THE TREATY A FAILURE.

It is saying this we take leave to add that the sooner the Berlin treaty is recognized for what it is an utterly abortive instrument the better. It is impossible to arrive at a pacific solution on the strict outlines of that treaty as nobody who understands what is now going on in Bulgaria and Roumelia will deny. The main provisions of that treaty relate to those provinces and they not only threaten to break down, but are done to all intents and purposes. They could only be carried out now by a joint occupation for an indefinite period and some better means of pacification than that should be found.

THE DEATH OF GEN. RENO

[RE]MARKABLE STORY—RENO SAID TO HAVE BEEN DELIBERATELY SHOT BY A MEMBER OF R. B. HAYES' REGIMENT

The Washington Sunday Herald of Nov [illegible] the following account of the death of Gen. Reno, which it vouches for as [coming] from a trustworthy source

[The] night before the memorable battle of South Mountain the Twenty-third Ohio [Volunteers], Col R B Hayes, were encamped [in a field] in which there were a number of [stacks]. The men were tired, and util[ized] the wheat in making their beds to the [destruction], necessarily, of the wheat. Gen [Reno] passing that way in his rounds dis[covered] what they had done, and upbraided [them] in no measured terms for their conduct [in destroying] private property, using lan[guage] that it would be idle now to repeat. [While he was thus engaged] that a [man] who is now president of the United [States] came up attracted by the loud [talk], and announcing himself as the [colonel] of the regiment demanded [what] was the meaning of the language. Gen Reno, in terms more forcible than polite, —— him and his —— regi[ment], and declared that he held him respon[sible] for the conduct of his men. The next day when the line was advancing on the enemy Gen Reno passed through the Twenty-third Ohio, on his way to the front. Only light skirmishing was going on at the time. The general had just left the flank of the regiment, when one of the men of the Twenty-third Ohio fired and killed him. At the time he was shot he was at least three quarters of a mile from the enemy's line. Col [illegible], who was at the battle of South Mountain as captain in the Twenty-third Ohio volunteers, and was afterward major of the eighty-eighth Ohio, and at present is trading [at] Fort Clark, Texas, tells the above remarkable story, which comes from an officer of the army to whom [illegible] related it some [time ago].

The Boss of the Family.

[From] R. G. Ingersoll's Sayings.]

[I hate] above all things a cross man. What [right] has he to murder the sunshine of a [day]? What right has he to assassinate the [joy of] life? When you go home you ought [to go like] a ray of light so that it will even [in the] night burst out of the doors and win[dows and] illuminate the darkness. Some [men think] their mighty brains have been in [a turmoil], they have been thinking who [will be] alderman from the 6th ward, they [have been] thinking about politics, great and [mighty] questions have been engaging their [minds], they have bought calico at five cents [and want] to sell it for seven. Think [of the] intellectual strain that must have [been upon] that man and when he gets home [everybody] else must look out for his comfort. [A woman] who has only taken care of five or [six children], and one or two of them sick, [has been] nursing them or singing to them, [trying] to make one yard of cloth do the [work of two], she, of course, is fresh and fine [and ready] to wait upon this gentleman—the [head of] the family—the boss!

[Sense] on the Silver Question.

[From the] New York World (Dem.)]

[And] now it is the silver Bland dollar which [is the] "fat" of the last session overvalued by [law] worth one dollar when it is really [worth] 84 cents. Is it not utterly inde[fensible] to coin underweighted multiples [of] that depreciated silver dollar? Of [course] this coinage should be stop[ped]. The silver dollar should be brought to [commercial] par with the gold dollar, and [every] fraction of the silver dollar should be [a fraction] of the whole. Subsidiary [coin] is the laboring man's money, and the [workman is] entitled to the use of as good money [as] the rich, though they may have, or rather [because] they may have, less of it to use. If the [poor man] is forced to take underweighted [coin he] will protect himself against [it] by an increased price for what he sells [if he is paid] gilded silver, and he can [do it in] no other way than by raising his [price to] sell in under weighted m[oney]

[illegible] as was expected. It is [illegible] it to correct this shabbiness [illegible] a metal socket to remedy the in[illegible]

[illegible] Yesterday afternoon [illegible] who were out in a small boat [illegible] near Blakely saw several [illegible] near Blakely. They were described as being very [large], having spouted water to a great

TORPEDO PRACTICE ON SHARKS

HUNTING THE VULTURES OF THE SEA IN A NOVEL AND SCIENTIFIC WAY

From the London News

Not a year indeed hardly a month passes but a shark spoils a British ship of one or more of her hands. While the vessel is in the harbor or riding in the offing a man tumbles overboard or is capsized from a boat or attempts to swim ashore and is torn in pieces by sharks within sight of help and sound of human voice. The Alice Davies of Liverpool has just returned to the Mersey and in her log is duly recorded a terrible catastrophe of this kind. She was anchored off a small river known as the Probolingo on the coast of Java, and one of her crew, a Welshman named Owen, went with four others to bathe. They were all good swimmers and Owen, who was the most skillful, had ventured some little distance from the vessel when he was suddenly heard to utter a piercing shriek. A large shark rising suddenly from the bottom had bitten him immediately below the fifth rib and literally torn him to pieces. A rope was thrown to him but his injuries were so terrible that he immediately sank. His companions escaped uninjured but of Owen's body no trace was recovered. The shark which attacked him was, we are told, judged to be some fifteen feet in length. Such dimensions although large are yet not unusual in the Javanese seas.

The shark is not so much the tiger as the vulture of the sea. Like the vulture he hesitates to attack anything with life in it but if hungry becomes for the time possessed with a courage not his own. We shall never exterminate them and his presence in tropical waters must always remain a constant source of danger. Meantime he has at least this merit that wherever he may be found he affords a certain rough species of sport. There is no better fun than fishing for a shark with a hook the size of a pitchfork and a huge piece of pork by way of bait. Harpooning the creature is also an exciting amusement although seldom practiced. Of late years too the shark has been hunted in novel and scientific ways. There is no better form of rifle practice than to shoot at him from over the stern with explosive bullets. If you miss him he still follows on. If he is hit a great hole is rent in him. He rolls slowly over on his back displaying his cruel gaping jaws and vast expanse of white under surface, and his brother sharks, coming up from around, quarrel and dispute fraternally over the carcass. Best however of all modes of shark chase because most scientific and consequently most amusing is that recently adopted in her majesty's navy of combining torpedo drill with shark fishery. A miniature torpedo is enclosed in a bait of junk or pork, and lowered with proper care. The battery is duly charged and at the moment that the huge fish seizes and as a pike fisher would say pouches the tempting morsel the circuit is completed. The effect is instantaneous. The head and jaws of the monster are blown into fragments and a bubbling circle in the water marks the spot where a few seconds before his dorsal fin was showing above the waves.

THE BISHOP-COBB TRIAL

A Norwich Conn dispatch of the 12th inst says. In the supreme court to-day the trial of Bishop and Mrs. Cobb was postponed until the first Tuesday in January. This needs some explanation. Originally they had been jointly indicted but some time ago the state attorney notified the counsel for the defense that Bishop would be tried first. Last Friday, however, Bishop sent word to the state attorney that he was ready to go on the witness stand and tell the whole story, consequently the order of the trial was changed so that Mrs Cobb's trial would come off first. Defendant's counsel was surprised by this change, for which he was not prepared, and at the opening of the hearing to-day moved for a continuance until the March term of the court. This was argued by counsel, state attorney Waller opposing so long a delay, and finally the court fixed the time as above stated. It is understood that Bishop will derive no benefit from his his proposed evidence and that his trial will be commenced immediately after the finishing of Mrs Cobb's case.

The Fever's Work.

Only one of the Memphis telegraphers was able to hold his ground from the first to the last during the plague. This man was Putnam, and many a long night while the fever was raging he was the only man in the operating room. The manager the operators and the clerks went down one after another, until he was the only man left to cope with the enormous press of business. Out of twenty five telegraphers employed in the service in Memphis eleven died nine recovered and five escaped.

His "Sands of Life" at Last "Run Out"

[New York Letter to Baltimore Sun.]

This week there has died in a quiet village of Connecticut known as Saybrook Point the man oddly known to all newspaper readers of twenty years ago as the "retired physician whose sands of life" being nearly run out [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] pulmonary [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Brown and claim the degree of M D. One very comical incident is reported. A man who had a deposit in the local branch of a Manchester bank hastily withdrew the amount and posted to Manchester, where he deposited it in the head office of the same bank. His explanation was that he thought the small banks would go first.

All surgical operations can be performed by his skilled hand and the patient need not fear the result.

will send to those living at a distance and who can not well visit his office a list of Printed Questions and by the answers when filled out he can tell the disease as well as the proper treatment almost as well as seeing the patient personally and will forward the proper medicines or instruments to any part of the country with full instructions and advice. Each letter requiring advice or list of questions must contain two postage stamps.

THE DOCTOR

has studied in the best Medical Schools in Europe and three years in the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, as more than one of the Medical men of the Medical Faculty in this State can testify.

CAUTION

Persons coming to Portland requiring medical treatment of the proper kind who desire to consult will do well please beware of persons who may try to coax them away to other so-called Doctors through pretended friendship for the patients. Look out for them, they are knaves prompted by selfish motives and what they can make. Be sure and ask for DR. P. M. BRENAN the Medical Lecturer at [illegible] his sign on his door.

SATURDAY MORNING NOV 30 78

THE SIERRA NEVADA SWINDLE

In California there is a great outcry on the part of those who have lost money by the late inflation of mining stocks which Sierra Nevada was made to lead But they deserve no sympathy whatever because they knew they were not engaging in legitimate business Their only object was to buy and sell so as to swindle somebody else It is probable that a number of persons in Oregon have also got their fingers burnt again in the same way The Sacramento Record Union traces from beginning this enormous swindle perpetrated by the Sierra Nevada management It began about the first of August Reports were given out at that time that the crosscut had struck rich ore At previous quotations of stock the mine was worth $540 000 But its quoted value now advanced quickly to $8 640 000 carrying up with it almost the entire Comstock lode Within two months the stock of Sierra Nevada was at a figure which made the quotable value of the mine $28 000 000 This had been accomplished by constant iteration of the statement that the crosscut is still in ore With a gullibility as marvelous as if they had never been cheated before the public invested with greatest eagerness The management of the mine pretended to authorize an examination and a certificate was produced to the effect that the crosscut was still advancing in a body of ore which gave assays from $700 to $1 000 a ton But the market after a while began to show a nervous tendency Every effort was made by the ring to force the stock up to a still higher figure and more reports about the crosscut were published daily Yet notwithstanding the fact that the crosscut has been running in ore all the time it is now developed that the cut was run before the rise and the little gash has been made to do all the work of bulling the stock Says the Record Union "Upon that cut the mine rose in quoted value from $540 000 to over $28 000 000 through the assistance of the most intrepid and shameless lying ever practiced for the purpose of robbery It is now certain that the crosscut was not pushed forward an inch, and it is fairly presumable that the manipulators of the mine did not dare to run it any further Simply stated a cut of ten feet was run into ore and work suspended No further exploration was made and all that is to day known of the existence of a body of ore in the Sierra Nevada mine is based upon the insignificant inferences to be derived from the fact of this cut In all the reports of running in ore which have followed, it is painfully evident that news channels have been prostituted whether ignorantly or viciously, to the purposes of the scoundrels who manipulate stock markets, and by its cunning devices rob men, women and children with remorseless conscience" The managers no doubt have lost a portion of their gains by trying in vain to bull the stock further but it is probable that they have cleared up not less than twenty million dollars out of this swindle While the victims are not to be pitied, yet that does not alter the fact that the swindling managers ought to pass the rest of their natural lives in the penitentiary

TOO MUCH "SOLIDITY"

Now and then one may pick up a southern newspaper which has discernment enough to see that the south may be too "solid" for its own good Among the few of this class is the Memphis Avalanche Inflexibly Democratic as it is, this paper nevertheless says

A solid south is a luxury which the section of country below the Ohio cannot afford It costs too much, and when obtained is productive of only evils to its possessors Few people will labor without ceasing in the cause of self injury The men who temporarily control the political destinies of the southern states are exceptions to the rule which causes most persons to keep a prematurely sharp eye on No 1 They seize the semblance of power but to find that while they grasp the shadow their opponents are obtaining the substance It is urged that the public welfare demands other than sectional divisions and that a 'solid south' inevitably means a 'solid north' It were better, says this southern newspaper for the Democracy to lose half the south than to insist as at present on 'solidity' as a species of party principle In that game of political freeze out known as sectional 'solidity,' we cannot hope to cope with the north And the game as played involves the material no less than the partisan interests of both sections Herein is the evil which our own partisans are fore most in forcing on the country at large Southern politicians are asked by this southern journal to take note of the fact that everywhere throughout the campaign the determination of our politicians to maintain a solid south was pointed to The result of which it makes plain enough and says

The question coming home to men who think there is something better and higher in party politics than maintaining a 'solid' south is how long can the south stand up in a fight of this kind? And besides, what is a solid south to us, though secured beyond peradventure? Have the northern elections furnished evidence of the wisdom of sectional 'solidity'? This is all very good sense but there is much chance that it will not be widely heeded.

A TREATY AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

The reciprocity treaty with the Hawaiian islands has resulted just as every intelligent person predicted A Washington dispatch says Secretary Sherman has caused to be prepared a very full statement of its workings When the treaty was under discussion in the senate he made a speech against its ratification on the ground that the United States could not afford the loss which the proposed reciprocity would cause. He now finds upon investigating the subject, that he was right in predicting that in a pecuniary sense the United States would lose heavily by the treaty The secretary has collected all the details of our commerce with the Sandwich Islands, and will present them in full In summing up he finds that for the first year under the treaty the duties remitted by the United States were in round numbers $165,000 greater than the invoice price of all the free goods from the United States to the Sandwich Islands The total amount remitted by the United States on staple articles alone was $1,125 000 while the total value of the goods exported to the Sandwich islands from the United States was only $960 000 For the year which ended January 1s o the United States remitted duties to the amount of $530 000 while the total value of all the goods exported from the United States to the Sandwich islands for the same time was only $ 000 greater than for the year before the treaty was ratified In other words the duties remitted by the United States for the time indicated amount to $ 000 more than the total invoice value of the increased importations by the Sandwich islands from the United States

These are actual figures and show results that cannot be questioned A good while ago THE OREGONIAN said that the United States treasury was losing through this miscalled treaty of reciprocity more than the entire value of all the commodities exported to the islands This in order to get a chance to sell $810 000 worth of goods to the islands last year in which we may suppose there was ten per cent clear profit amounting say to $81 000 our government was made to relinquish a revenue of $530 000

This is some of the statesmanship of Sargent of California and Mitchell of Oregon As for our own state there is a further consequence of the treaty in the annihilation of direct trade with the islands This trade was growing to considerable importance but the treaty has transferred it to the ring at San Francisco which got that measure enacted in order to control the trade of the islands and transfer to the pockets of its members the great sums which should be paid the United States for duties on island produce The scheme has worked just as intended and our government and people suffer the loss

THE SHADOW OF A COMING EVENT

Among the New York Herald's specialties are its editorial comments on European politics, which are widely noted for accuracy and clearness In a recent article on The Failure of the Berlin Treaty it points out how that treaty may be fulfilled to the last and littlest detail and yet not secure to England those objects which Beaconsfield declared were finally secured when the treaty was made For example the English ministry supposed or pretended that they had stipulated for the withdrawal of Russian troops within a certain period from Turkish soil But without violation of a line of the treaty Russia may in fact keep her armies indefinitely at Adrianople It should be remembered remarks the Herald that the relations of Russia and England in Turkey have been recently defined by three instruments—the treaty of San Stefano called the preliminary articles of peace the Anglo Russian agreement made by Count Schouvaloff and Lord Salisbury and the treaty of Berlin England was a party to the making of two of these but by declarations made in one of the two she became an assenting party to certain provisions of the third England's consent to certain parts of the San Stefano treaty was given in the April memorandum in these words Her Majesty's government engage not to dispute the articles of the preliminary treaty of San Stefano which are not modified by the ten preceding points if after the articles have been duly discussed in congress Russia persists in maintaining them England therefore is under engagement not to dispute the arrangement Russia might make with the sultan in regard to war indemnity and not to dispute the time agreed upon for the withdrawal of the Russian troops from Turkish territory and, furthermore recognized that the provisions of the San Stefano treaty, not repealed between Russia and England would remain valid whatever was done at Berlin that proceedings at Berlin might revise that treaty, but would not repeal it Now of the two points thus reserved for settlement between the czar and the sultan one was not touched at all in the Berlin treaty the other was touched in a way to leave it eventually to the terms of the San Stefano preliminaries It was declared at Berlin at what period the Russian troops must be withdrawn from Bulgaria and from Eastern Roumelia but there are other parts of European Turkey than these and as to those other parts no time for evacuation was named And it is clear Russia intend to say England it is also clear never meant that but as the Herald says her ministers with a blundering incapacity almost without parallel have, by open treaties and secret engagements committed her to such a position, and they are simply endeavoring to cover this fact with solemn bravado —to hide it from the public by discussions of the enforcement of the treaty of Berlin with the intention to declare one of these days if Russia keeps her troops in Turkey next year, that she has violated the treaty Nobody doubts that there are complications in these relations between England and Russia which within a short time, will require solution by the sword And as if these difficulties were not enough the coming contest between the two great powers for supremacy in Asia draws near enough to cast a further deep shadow over one half the world

Another of those ponderous articles addressed to Gov Thayer, written in a mixed tone of objurgation, expostulation and remonstrance comes out in the Standard The complaint is that the governor is not sufficiently taking care of the interests of the party He doesn't consort and counsel with the experts and swindlers of the late administration in whom, according to their own estimate the fullness of Democracy is embodied He doesn't adhere to those who have distinguished themselves by devotion to party and principle —which means those who have given the state the delectable administration it has had during the last eight years—and thus prove his fidelity as a Democrat hence their organs are convinced that "the party" is in danger Just wait until the investigating committee makes its report It will then be seen what good reasons Gov Thayer has for ignoring these barnacles of partisan dishonesty and taking counsel of better men In nothing does the executive prove his fidelity so much as in a course which goes directly against the rascality which for so many years has been plucking the state under the pretense of faithful adherence to the party If the organs of this scheme were satisfied with the executive it would be sad evidence that he was following the precedents of the Grover Chadwick administration

[illegible] of the Northern Pacific railroad the C [illegible] says the Texas Pacific people [illegible] compete [illegible] enterprise with their own But the Northern Pa[illegible] the original grant [illegible] It has naturally objected [illegible] to the riders [illegible] Mitchell has [illegible] upon [illegible] the Union and Central Pacific roads The schemes [illegible] and [illegible] rely upon the fairness [illegible] owing [illegible] to go on with the [illegible] proposals for [illegible] between the Missouri and the Yel[illegible]

It is hoped that the movement reported in another part of this paper to inaugurate a district agricultural society will receive the hand of the business men of our city and county the favor and assistance it deserves It is an undertaking which can be productive of the greatest benefits An annual fair of this kind in connection with the mechanics fair which in itself proved so attractive recently might become very successful A combination of these two could not fail of the best results

It will not be good policy for the Democratic party to rely on holding a majority in congress through its numbers [illegible] districts in the south The thing which first beat the Democratic party was its refusal to tolerate opposition in the southern states On that issue the government was wrested from that party twenty years ago Persistence in such policy will keep the government out of its hands indefinitely

Says the Salem Mercury The fearful prophecies of THE OREGONIAN as to the certain results of silver remonetization have not been realized and are not likely to be We remind the Mercury of the judgment pronounced upon those who have eyes yet see not

If it be true as late dispatches affirm that Russia is going to the support of the ameer there will be war immediately on other parts of the line The main struggle will probably be in the Ottoman dominion

It is intimated by the Albany Evening Journal that Senator Conkling will introduce bills to repeal the silver law and the resumption act

AMUSEMENTS.

—Grand matinee this afternoon "Macbeth" will be presented for the last time

—Manager Maguire's company Olympia next Monday evening in Miss Walters appearing as "Cora" will be rendered at Seattle on Thursday

—This grand drama will be presented for the first and last time to-night Mr Mayo appears as "Macbeth" and Miss Walters as "Lady Macbeth" supported by the full company. Positively the last appearance of Mr Mayo.

[illegible] MINSTRELS.—These justly celebrated minstrels have arrived on the Oregon and will appear at New Market theater next Monday evening for the first time in this city The public will bear in mind that this troupe of minstrels is the same which appeared here about two years ago. The present company is the older and original organization The sale of seats begins at the Palace of Art.

—This tragedy was produced at the theater last evening on the occasion of Mr Mayo's benefit. Mr Mayo personated the leading role and space prevents only the merest allusion to his acting. Suffice it to say that last night he played with all the dignity and fervor that have characterized his work for a long time past. Never, perhaps, was he seen to better advantage, and it is noticeable that many of his most obtrusive mannerisms were greatly toned down His Hamlet is otherwise the same well known picture—with grace, princely majesty and in melancholy. Upon the audience he exerted the same fascination as heretofore and his best efforts were received with enthusiastic applause The support was quite fair. Miss Walters as the Queen was not wanting in force and ability. Mr Lindsay as the King, gave a very pleasing rendering. Miss Woodthorpe as Ophelia gave an intelligent interpretation of the character but was somewhat deficient in poetic charm Her rendering of the mad scene was peculiarly touching and effective. The remainder of the cast was entrusted to competent hands As the First Grave Digger Mr Ward did splendidly

LADIES' FAIR.—The interest in the fair increases rather than diminishes, as the days pass, and encouraged by success, the ladies work with a good will. The receipts so far have been large for an enterprise of this kind This evening will be devoted to raffling the articles for which chances have been sold during the week. Many of the articles are of considerable value, and there will probably run high The fair will close to-night award.

TEMPERANCE RALLY.

There will be a grand mass meeting of the friends of temperance at the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association at 7 30 this evening with interesting exercises, Dr J. STEAMBOAT COLLISION

At an early hour Friday morning a disastrous collision occurred on the river between the steamers Traveler and McMinnville, a short distance below Oregon City The McMinnville was steaming up the river and the Traveler coming down with a party of excursionists on board who had been to Oregon City to attend a ball A heavy cloud of fog hung over the river so dense that an object could be perceived only a very short distance The steamers were sounding their whistles at brief intervals to avoid a collision Capt Kelly of the Traveler heard the other boat coming and immediately sounded his whistle to pass to the right The pilot on the McMinnville answered in like manner Wishing however to pass on the left hand side and run in near the shore, Capt Kelly turned his boat in that direction The McMinnville was nearer than he thought and in endeavoring to pass her bow the Traveler struck her quartering a short distance abaft the bow and cut her nearly half in twain In a leaking condition the McMinnville was brought down to this city and will be beached for repairs at Albina The damage is not very extensive, and can soon be repaired The damage sustained by the Traveler is very slight No person was injured

THE PORTLAND FIRE DEPARTMENT.

GRAND CELEBRATION OF THE DEDICATION OF THE NEW HOUSE OF WILLAMETTE ENGINE CO NO 1 AND RECEPTION OF THE NEW STEAM ENGINE OF TIGER ENGINE CO NO 5 MAGNIFICENT PROCESSION DINNER TOASTS AND SPEECHES

Thursday was a gala day for the firemen of Portland and vicinity which was evidenced by the immense numbers that participated in the double celebration of the dedication of the new house for Willamette No 1 and the housing of the new steamer for Tiger No 5 Promptly at half past 1 P M Willamette No 1 preceded by Brenner's brass band formed at their old house and proceeded up Fourth street to Vigilance H & L Co No 1's house and from thence up to the house of Tiger No 5 both companies falling in line with a large number of men From there they proceeded to the house of Protection No 4 and coming down First street made a display long to be remembered by those who witnessed it

Arriving at First and Washington streets they went to the house of Columbian No 3 and countermarched to Multnomah No 2's house from whence they again countermarched back to the house of Willamette No 1 and fell into line with both engines of No 1 and No 5 gayly decorated and No 1 preceded by about fifteen and a magnificent span of black horses

After arranging a few preliminaries they marched down First street to Oak and up Oak to Fourth and arriving at Fourth took in both sides of the street with the engines in the center making a display which was almost beyond conception Up Fourth street they went to the house of No 1 where after an interesting ceremony they proceeded to house the engine which being completed and after a rousing three cheers came back to No 1's house and his honor Mayor Newbury in an elaborate address formally turned over the possession of the keys to the foreman Mr A W Witherell who responded in a few well measured and appropriate remarks and concluded by extending to all an invitation to Turn halle where a bounteous Thanksgiving dinner that would have done credit to the gods was prepared by the king of caterers Frank Fabre

Arriving at Turn halle, the whole procession being seated and everybody eating bent on having a good time with mirth and good humor held full sway for quite a while The following is the

TOASTS AND THE RESPONSES

The city of Portland

Response by His Honor Mayor Newbury

Portland is the greatest city of 20 000 inhabitants known to the average Oregonian and she is destined within the next twenty five years to become the commercial metropolis of the Pacific coast having as she has at her back an agricultural territory embracing an empire in extent and with a thrifty and industrious population in and around her She is not affected by a panic in California stocks or a drought in San Joaquin valley Her commerce shall soon extend to every considerable seaport of the earth returning wealth and comfort building happy homes for her enterprising citizens which shall be adequately protected from the fire fiend by a fire department which is not excelled in America

The common council of the city of Portland ever ready to protect the material property of the citizens by the liberal support of the fire department.

Response by Councilman Simon In arising to respond to the toast proposed I cannot refrain from falling into the old and hackneyed formula of wishing that the task had devolved on abler hands than mine I make no pretension to after dinner speeches or rhetorical effusions of any kind, but if lacking in eloquence I feel certain you will give me credit for sincerity The city of Portland feels proud of her volunteer fire department feels proud of the noble deeds and heroic conduct of its members and feels proud of the character and standing of those who, banded together in one common brotherhood form the fire department of the city of Portland We all know the value and importance of a well organized and disciplined department and how essential it is to the success and prosperity of any city that we have such a department taken from all classes and vocations in life certainly proves and I can fully assert it at no man can over estimate the value of the department which this city feels a pride in possessing The municipal authorities have dealt liberally with the fire department, of the city but I do not hesitate to say that nothing has been done for them which the fire department has not amply deserved and faithfully earned The completion of this new house for which No 1 have all longed for and looked to so eagerly and the new engine that No 5 have worked and wished for so long stand forth to day in all their regal magnificent beauty We are proud of your new house and of your new engine The house occupied by Willamette Engine Co No 1 to day for the first time and the beautiful new engine received by Tiger Engine Co No 5 to day for the first time are but fitting tributes for the long and faithful services performed by you in the city's interest I call upon you all to join me in wishing that your new house and new engine, the cause of our present pleasant gathering may be the means of cementing still stronger the friendship and fraternal ties that exist between the members of the Portland fire department and for so long a period has bound them together, and I call upon you all above all else to join with me in drinking not only to the common council but to officers and members of the fire department

The Portland fire department an army of generous warriors whose pay is merited praise whose battle is to save

Responded by Joe Bachman president of the Portland fire department

Mr President and Gentlemen—To that sentiment—the Portland fire department—I can respond with most heartfelt pride Connected with it for the past twenty years, as I have been I have had full opportunity to realize it as an army of generous warriors whose pay is merited praise whose battle is to save Generous warriors enlisted as they are in the grand work of salvation may they ever be appreciated as they deserve and may just praise attach to them for their deeds of daring and true manliness long after the battle of life is fought

The fire and water committee of the common council their high appreciation of the services of the firemen and their uniform generosity in all dealings with the department will never be forgotten May they never see a fire that water will not quench

Response by Mr Wm Andrus a member of the committee

The Exempt Firemen's Association

Response by Mr A B Halleck

Our new steamer the engine on the hill may she justify all our high anticipations of the reliable service she is to accomplish in the hands of No 5's gallant boys.

Response by George C Sears president

Mr President and Fellow Firemen—I am proud to respond to the neat tribute Our new steamer—our engine on the hill That she will ever occupy an elevated position not only on the hill but in the Portland Fire Department there is no doubt for with this our new incentive to battle with the destroying element No 5 will not prove laggards in the race to save And we do and shall ever hold it the highest honor to be on an equal footing with the other gallant and thoroughly efficient companies of our department. We do not intend to rival—but to be a power among the powers and that our hopes and anticipations of the reliable services of our little steamer may not be blighted we pledge ourselves to combine our strength and work as one for success even in the face of death So we'll toast our gallant No 5 with hearty right good will and pay a lasting tribute to "our engine on the hill"

"To the new house of Willamette Engine Co No 1 the headquarters of a worthy branch of as gallant a department as ever saved a life or quenched a flame

Response by S A Moreland President of Willamette Engine Co

Fellow Firemen and Citizens—In the history of all communities we read their progress in civilization power and wealth in the styles of their architecture The ignorant and degraded Indian is not more different from the refined and intelligent Caucassian than is the lowly wigwam from the magnificent palaces whose lofty domes tell where may be found the home of science, wealth and power So the magnificent structure presented by the city of Portland to Willamette Engine Co to day when compared with the humble building in which their engine was housed a quarter of a century ago tells of the great progress of the young but mighty city of Portland The company ever faithful to its motto, "Able and Willing" has shown its appreciation of the efforts of those who have been ready to afford every possible means and incentive to its efficiency This large gathering these outbursts of enthusiasm the joyful [illegible] demeanor and cheerfulness with which you have all joined in the festivities of to day speak in far more emphatic terms than any words can express the interest which we all feel as we enter into the splendid building furnished to us as a branch of the gallant fire department of the city As members of Willamette No 1 we thank you for uniting with us so heartily in celebrating this interesting occasion To the city authorities mayor and members of the common council we tender our sincerest gratitude for their efforts in thus presenting to us another incentive to endure danger and brave death itself to shield the valuable interests of this city from the flames Amid the comfortable and pleasant surroundings here afforded the clang of the alarm bell will not fall on heedless ears but at its first stroke we shall spring to the post of duty and be ready to go where dangers hurtle most thickly or the destroyer is doing its worst work

Dinner being over the procession reformed and proceeded to escort the various companies back to their quarters, which was completed shortly after 6 P M, and Willamettes returned to their new quarters and at 7 30 P M opened their house for inspection to the public in general and the reception committee were busy until [illegible] P M, so great was the number of callers

Great credit is due the various committees for the manner in which the programme was carried out, and not forgetting the tender boys, who turned out in full force and conducted themselves with propriety all through The miniature firemen, Percy Thomas and Thomas King who preceded the Willamettes as tassel boys were the admiration of all who saw them.

The only cloak house in the city is Harris' Emporium of Fashion.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

HOW THE DAY WAS OBSERVED IN PORTLAND—THE UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE

Thursday Thanksgiving day was observed by the people of Portland with becoming respect and was a day of general happiness Excepting a very few small shops, all business houses were closed All had a holiday and all seemed to enjoy it

The Baptist church was filled Thursday morning by an audience representing the Presbyterian, Baptist Congregational and Methodist churches Benjamin Spalding presided at the organ and introduced the services with a beautiful voluntary Rev A S Coats pronounced an invocation and read a Psalm of thanksgiving A choir led by Professor Morse leader of the Baptist choir sang with the spirit and understanding the anthem Rejoice in the Lord ye People Rev J H A [illegible] read the 8th chapter of Deuteronomy Dr Lindsley led the congregation in a comprehensive prayer

THE SERMON

By Rev J H Acton was based upon Deut viii 10 When thou hast eaten and art full then thou shalt bless the Lord thy God for the good land which he hath given thee

The speaker's thoughts were substantially as follows

As [illegible] goes down the Swiss Berlgsman [illegible] his alpine horn shouts "Praise the Lord" Another takes up the strain and still another till all the Alps resounds with praise So we too should unite in one great world's chorus of thanksgiving and praise

The word "Bless" in the text means [illegible] the same as our modern word thanksgiving and thanksgiving is a command laid upon us very much just as much as prayer I call attention to the

LEADING ELEMENTS OF THANKSGIVING

1 True thanksgiving is a voluntary acknowledgment of favors God exacts nothing and in one sense pleases nothing [illegible] He requires [illegible] His service is voluntary God works the same in all nature Nature never shows coercion [illegible] but laws of growth God only arrests those laws [illegible] with nature's laws sends forth the blade stalk flower, and fruit So the man if he yields to God's gracious influences will unfold without any coercion and the highest unfolding will be in voluntary uplooking and outflowing of thanksgiving for all these good gifts of God

2 Thanksgiving is an acknowledgment of gifts bestowed by another If nature is only chance, or blind laws or some inviolable order and if by these all our benefits come then there is no excuse for thanksgiving If God is not back of nature's laws then there can be no true thanksgiving Heart responds to heart Back of nature is not chance but the great heart of God planning giving, to each of us favors so we ought to be and can be thankful

3 We are not thankful for what we purchase We buy articles of value at a store we are not grateful to the seller, because we give him an equivalent When a gift is laid [illegible] it is room for thanksgiving so God's precious gifts to us are free We cannot purchase them Every one of them should draw out our thanksgiving

4 The value of the gifts are an element of thanksgiving

5 [illegible] the [illegible] with [illegible] of [illegible] thanksgiving [illegible] not an awakened in the heart of the receiver It is the feeling in [illegible] the [illegible] that [illegible] valuable or otherwise [illegible]

6 The character of the giver has much [illegible] with the awakening of a gift An [illegible] may give [illegible] of value [illegible] which [illegible] doesn't know the value of the gift There can be no gratitude [illegible] But suppose a prince were the giver [illegible] the Lord [illegible] comes into our homes and with his own hand fills them with choicest gifts

WHAT REASONS HAVE WE FOR THANKSGIVING?

1 Nationally No page of history is so bright as our own If it has some dark spots on it it is true Our war was a terrible thing and yet more men perished at the siege of Jerusalem than during the whole of our war Pestilence has touched us and the south once more is clothed in black and yet there are Islands in the sea upon which rest every year the dreaded scourge of the cholera Across the Pacific, millions of people are starving while we sit in the midst of plenty Oregon's granaries are almost bursting with her fine wheat

2 The success of the Gospel is a cause of thanksgiving We live in a wonderful time Never before has the cause of God advanced so rapidly There has never before been such a wonderful temperance work as that led by Murphy and Reynolds Never such revivals as those under Moody and others And now in our own city God is visiting us with power and pouring out his Spirit especially upon the young men

HOW SHALL WE EXPRESS OUR THANKSGIVING

1 As we stand in the midst of our blessings we should feel like Moses, "this is holy ground" The best possible expression of thanksgiving is to do something for others Be an almoner of God's bounty Scatter blessings as God scatters them—let no one but God know it

2 The highest and best way to express our thanksgiving is to endeavor to lead some soul to Christ

3 In our exultation over these meaner gifts let us not forget God's greatest—our Saviour! There can be no true thanksgiving if we forget Christ. What shall you give back to God? Give yourself

At the conclusion of the sermon the choir sang very finely "Remember Me, O Lord"

Dr Lindsley presented the claims of the Helpers' Home and Ladies' Relief society and a collection amounting to $50 40 was taken up

In the evening the Presbyterian and Congregationalist churches united in a gospel mass meeting in the hall of the Y M C A Every seat was filled Dr Lindsley preached with power upon "what must I do to be saved?" The inquiry meeting was one of the best held during this series of meetings

Religiously, this was one of the most marked thanksgiving days which Portland has seen for many years

THANKSGIVING DAY AT TRINITY

Thanksgiving was a high day at Trinity church Union prayer was said by the bishop and the rector, The bishop preached an interesting and instructive sermon upon the planting and growth of the Episcopal church in the United States The discourse was a continuation of one delivered by the bishop in the same place upon a similar occasion two years ago The chancel was appropriately and tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, ferns, flowers and yellow sheaves of the gathered harvest The music was magnificent and filled the church to overflowing The responses to the commandments, arranged by the choir master Mr Kinross, were beautifully sung The choir consisted of four soprano, four contralto, three tenor and three bass voices together with the wonderful alto part voice of the choir master, Mr Kinross with Mr Vinton at the organ

The congregation was very large—some persons not being able to get seats The offering amounted to $220 and was voted to the Good Samaritan Hospital

A WANT LONG FELT.—We are glad to be able to announce that what has all along been so much needed here viz a competent teacher to impart class tuition in the rudiments of vocal music has now been secured In another column Mr Kinross announces that a rudimentary class will be formed on the evening of Saturday next, December 7th at the hall of the Handel and Haydn Society, at 7 30, and refers the public to D W Prentice & Co for information terms, etc Mr Kinross's time being so much in demand it was not until urgent influences were brought to bear that he determined to fill up the gap so long felt to be empty We have no doubt the tuition will be found satisfactory and that on Saturday evening next he will have a very large attendance We hear rumors of the establishment of a conservatory of music on a large scale with this gentleman as principal in which will be taught all branches of music, vocal and instrumental as also thorough bass and harmony In this undertaking Mr Kinross has already secured the services of Prof Cook of Michigan who will take care of the rudimentary and theory pupils while the piano and organ pupils will be under charge of Mr Francis Vinton a gentleman whose ability is already recognized here The names of the other teachers we have not heard mentioned but do not doubt they will be equally able with those above This is something our citizens as well as those of the whole state and Washington territory should not lose sight of There are very few states in our union where a complete course of instruction in all the branches of music can be had thus rendering it no longer necessary to send pupils abroad for complete musical education. We trust this project will be fully carried out, and predict for it the success it so well deserves Come Mr Kinross get out your prospectus

NEW YORK FASHION RECORD

There is an attempt in progress to introduce an extraordinary big silk hat with a remarkably small brim said to be French

Soiled kid gloves are the rage, and no fashionable woman thinks of putting on a new pair of gants de Suede until she has rubbed them violently over a newspaper

Gilt and gold lace is used a good deal for trimming and although it is known to be gaudy it is said to be high [illegible] the modiste intends that no gilt [illegible] shall escape

[illegible] intended for the swells of the period [illegible] the horns of which stick [illegible] catch all who attempt to strike the [illegible]

Sealskin sacques are [illegible] to be worn longer Some of them cannot be if they are worn out already and all the other trimming in the world will not improve the garments

Some prophesy the short reign of the mantle a long wraps and that the old fashioned coat is to be revived The prophesy has no effect upon those who habitually wear shawls

Four plate buttons—small Creedmoor targets—are the style among people whose only success in attracting notice in the world is by their conspicuous attire and highfalutin embellishments

In Paris street dresses are becoming shorter and shorter Young ladies of the ballet have an idea they will be able soon to appear in the streets in stage costume without attracting attention

Embroidered black silk suits are just sufficiently expensive to be highly fashionable, and in them might make you believe old Mrs Sheba or Frau Rothschild had come in town to go shopping

Those little [illegible] bonnets that the ladies are wearing are an exemplification of the proverb that half a loaf is better than none at all Some of them including trimming must cost as much as a dollar

Fur trimmed wraps are highly fashionable but no one should put ermine on a waterproof cloak or silver fox fur on a calico wrapper In view of some prevailing fashions this is necessary information

Cutaway coats and masculine waistcoat seem to please the young ladies immensely "There's something so awfully nobby about it you know and we don't mind a bit you know being laughed at by the men

THE SKEIN

Slip, [illegible] slip your skein, my Kitty,
Over my hands, and wind and wind
All the while with little pity
Tangling, tangling heart and mind.
Kitty eyes upon the wind
Set on me, my beautiful.

Now you drop your eyes completely,
Winding, winding dreamily;
Wherefore, wherefore smile so sweetly
On a thing that cannot see?
If you must smile, [illegible]
I will bear it as I may.

Ah, there! [illegible]
With [illegible]
[illegible] my heart beat [illegible] while sitting
[illegible] I try to bear it ill
[illegible] do you know, my dear,
'Tis my heart you're winding there.

Kitty, I am in a vision,
All the world to mist doth die,
Only [illegible] Elysian,
[illegible] fingers fly.
Surely, if they flit too near,
I shall catch and kiss them, dear.

Tangled, pouting, frown not, Kitty,
Though I gladly bear the pain;
For your anger is so pretty,
It may make me sin again.
There, 'tis well. Now wind and wind
Tangling for her heart and mind.

Now 'tis done. The last thread lingers
Sadly from me, slow to part,
Can'st thou see that in my fingers
I am holding up my heart?
Wind and win; I do not care,
Smile or frown, and I will bear.

Ah! so fast and quick you wind it,
I no more can keep it mine.
Do you wonder that you find it
Throbbing now close, close to thine?
Tangled, tangled are the twain—
Kiss, kiss, kiss them free again.
—Robert B[illegible]

UNCLE DAVY'S SAFETY

"Well, Jane, have you made up your mind? I leave the matter entirely in your hands."

My husband looked across the table at me, and held a glass of wine between him and the light, screwing up his eyes as he examined the color.

We were sitting at dessert in the old dining room at Turton, the dark polished mahogany table reflecting the bright faces of our six children. Two by me—the eldest, who was so like his father, and the youngest, who could not eat tidily, and wanted mamma to cut up his orange and wipe his mouth. Opposite, by Ronald, were the two little ones with curly heads and mischievous fingers, who were sailing orange-boats in the purple finger glass, and coaxing papa to make more. The girls were one on each side, the elder one peering at me with her great blue eyes, and evidently wondering whatever it was that mamma was to make up her mind about. I was going to answer when I caught her curious gaze, and then I stopped.

"I'll tell you about it when the children go to bed," I said.

Lucy dropped her head with a blank expression of disappointment, which Ronald observed with infinite amusement. There was a little nod across the table to me, and a whisper about little pitchers having long ears, which made Lucy blush. Presently we went to the drawing room, and the children began to romp, at the conclusion of which I carried off the youngest to the nursery, and before I came down again I went for a moment into my little morning room and sat down over the fire—I wanted to think.

People said I was a fortunate and a happy woman, and so I was. Our home was one of those fair English halls standing amid its own far-spreading grounds and rich farms. I could match my husband and children against the best and noblest in the land, and yet I had plenty to make me oftimes thoughtful and sometimes sad. There is a cross in every lot, and mine lay in the future—not my own, but my children's.

My father-in-law had been an extravagant man, who had drained the entailed estate as near as he could. My husband, with a moderately large income, had many claims on his purse, and moreover, with scrupulous honor, applied every available sum to the payment of his father's debts. We had a large family; the eldest one was provided for by the entail. But if this went on, what could we do for the other little ones? Over and over again I had tried to bring the matter seriously before Ronald, but a careless security in the future was a part of his natural disposition, and I could not persuade him to make any real effort for their benefit. Invariably he said, "Just wait till I pay Saunders and B[illegible]ton, and then we will begin to lay by." And I had to think sadly of my own poor portion of £5,000, invested in shares in the county bank, and hope and trust.

I was thinking more sadly to-night because my husband, who had just returned from a business visit to London, had met me with an unexpected proposal. He had fallen in with an old uncle who had spent the greater part of his life in India, toiling for the golden fortune that never came. Now a decrepit old man and a confirmed invalid, he had expended the little he possessed, and was actually in want. Ronald described his miserable lodging, told how much he suffered, and ended with a proposal that we should ask him to come and live at Turton. The kind thought was just like him, but I looked terribly blank when the idea was suggested, and opposed it violently. My woman's brain at once embraced the obstacles, and it may be, exaggerated them.

"Think what a tie it would be," I said, "a third person to spoil our quiet evenings and readings aloud—a somebody to interfere with our walks and drives, and dinners. The poor children would be hushed for fear of disturbing the invalid, I should have to give up my time to his amusement and comfort. Besides, think of the expense. We agreed to give up the carriage horses, but that would be out of the question if he were here, and could not walk or use the pony phaeton. And we must have an extra man servant to wait on him, and if we used another set of rooms we should require a second house maid."

I drew such a melancholy picture of the consequences that my husband said at last:

"Well, my dear, please yourself, it shall be as you like. I only wish we could have made the old man comfortable; he was very kind to me when I was a school boy."

So I sat in my room and planned how we could manage, gradually beginning to think I had been selfish in my opposition. I thought it might be arranged. I could give up this very morning room for him to sit in, and let him sleep in the south room next door. Walters might wait upon him if the stable boy helped in the pantry, and if we gave up the pretty pony phaeton we might keep the brougham. As to the disarrangements of our family enjoyments, we must put up with it. The kindness would bring its own recompense, somehow.

I went down stairs with a lighter heart, for I was conscious of a praiseworthy resolution, and sending off the children to bed, knelt down by my husband's side and said:

"Shall we write the invitation, Ronald?"

He answered me with a kiss and a brightening of the eye, which were almost enough recompense for the sacrifice.

The invitation was written, accepted, and before the end of a fortnight old Mr. Lav[illegible]d Turton—"Uncle Davy," as we called him—made his appearance.

I went out to meet him, and tried to give him a hearty welcome, but he was seemingly a very unamiable old man. His manner was short and snappish, his little gray eyes looked at me suspiciously, and when he attempted to smile he sneered sarcastically. I led him into the drawing room and offered to relieve him of his great coat and stick. But no; he growled at me as if I had taken an unpardonable liberty, and setting his stick across his knees, leaned forward on it, and stared me full in the face. I tried to look unconcerned, but my cheeks had flushed, and my tone was sharp when I desired Lucy to run up-stairs to the school room.

The old man's eyes twinkled, and the sneering smile came to his lips.

"You are offended with me, madam," he said. "I beg your pardon, but my staff is an old friend—the best friend I have. I never allow it to leave my side."

He never did. By day it rested on his knees, by night it lay on the bed beside him. His brain had evidently been affected by his illness, and showed its disorder by a strange attachment to that wooden staff, with its round knob for a handle. It was a perfect monomania.

I remember once one of my little boys seized it when he was dozing, and converting it into a horse, rattled up and down the room with it. Uncle Davy waked, and his anger knew no bound. I ran out of the room with the child, imagining him unable to survive anger, and when I returned I found the old man sobbing and crying like an infant, with his hand on the [illegible] staff. Truly, Uncle Davy's stay at Turton was a sad trial to me. Over and over again I regretted that we had invited him, and so I am sure did Ronald too. He said to me, "we must seek him a lodging elsewhere," but the plan was hardly formed when the old man fell ill.

He had a lingering illness, and I watched beside him day and night. Then for the first time I found that he had formed a sort of attachment to me and the children, and given us a little corner of the heart that I had supposed to be wholly devoted to his staff.

But he was a trying invalid, and at last I was fairly worn out with the cares and watching. He protested against nurse or servant, and kept me constantly at his bedside. From no one else would he receive food or medicine, and if I left him for a moment he was miserable. But his evident dependence and clinging affection touched my heart in spite of myself. I began to love and tend him gently, like a baby, ruling and chiding him as I should have done one of my own little ones when it was naughty. Under this treatment we got on better, and should I have managed without any outburst had it not happened that one unlucky morning, in a desire of occupation, I [illegible] the [illegible] had been the one important duty of his day, about which he [illegible] with clean towels and wash leather. Since himself incapacitated, he had requested me as an especial favor to undertake the process, and anxious to indulge him in small matters, I had complied—holding the knobbed handle, as he directed, in a cambric handkerchief, and rubbing from right to left. This morning he had been in a singularly perverse humor; nothing pleased him, and the supposed neglect of his favorite caused the lowering storm to burst forth. He raged and stormed for an hour, threatening me with every sort of vengeance. At length, fairly exhausted, he sank back in bed and bade me leave him—he would try and sleep.

I hovered about the next room for some time, then finding all quiet, stole away for an hour's rest. When I returned all was silent as before; nevertheless I noiselessly turned the lock and looked in. What was my horror to find the bed empty, and my patient escaped.

I called the servants and sent everywhere to seek him. But he was not soon found; no one had seen him leave the house, and we could not imagine what was his object in doing so. At last I discovered him myself in a retired corner of the shrubbery, trying with his feeble efforts to dig a hole and bury his staff.

"No one is worthy of it," he said, but he would not leave it when we had discovered his secret hiding place, and after many arguments I prevailed upon him to return and let me polish and clean it.

That night he was very ill; the exertion and exposure brought on a relapse. He bade me put the staff quite close to him, and his feeble fingers clasped it fondly and stroked it down. Just when he was dying he put it into my hand.

"Keep it—never part with it—promise me, Jane."

I promised, for I saw his heart was bent on my doing so.

"Jane—the staff is—will—children—." But his voice failed, and his head fell back. He never spoke again, and before daybreak he was dead.

We laid him in the family vault in the Turton church, for, in spite of his wanderings and wayward life, he was of the old stock, and putting aside his favorite staff in my oak cabinet, we went back to our old ways and almost forgot him.

Years passed, during which more little faces clustered round our board, and the elder ones were sent off to school. The clouds that had so long skirted the distance came nearer and nearer, and at last burst over our heads. The bank in which my money was vested suddenly failed, the steward who had managed my husband's affairs proved unfaithful, and absconded with all that he could convert into money; creditors pressed round, and were clamorous; we were ruined.

Nothing remained for us but to leave Turton, if possible to let, and to go and live on the continent. There was to be a sale after we left, and the handbills were already out. I had spent long days in packing and arranging, and unable longer to meet the children's doleful faces and sad regrets at parting with their old pets, I hurried to my little morning room—the room that had witnessed many a dreary hour of watching over Uncle Davy. I was crying, in spite of my efforts at self command. In the hall I had seen little Edmund with his arms around the old rocking horse, sobs bursting from the rosy lips that he pressed against his favorite. Ivy was taking the toys from the doll's house as I passed the school room. Oh! my heart bled sadly, for every grief of theirs was doubly mine.

The maid had been packing, and the oak cabinet had been unlocked, the door swinging to and fro on its hinges. The drawer below held my chief treasures, which I had reserved to put up at the last; fancying this a favorable opportunity, I now opened it and began to sort the things.

A packet of copy books—large round blotted text hand—on the outside of each cover one of the children's names and date. I tied them together and put them up. A little carved ivory box, which had long ago been a present from a sailor brother, with nine neatly folded little white paper parcels inside, and a curl of soft hair in each—the last causing a few bitter tears to fall down on my black dress as kneeling down I unfolded it and touched the smooth tress. Poor little baby that had pined when sorrow came to me, that had died in my arms, and now lay with its little coffin resting beside Uncle Davy's. I moved the packet of baby's clothes that I had put away the day after the funeral—the little gowns and caps and things—and gulped down a very sad sob. Poor little baby, God had provided for it!

There were yet a few more things, and then the drawer was empty, save for Uncle Davy's staff. I left it lying there while I packed up the other things, and it was still there when I went down to tea.

As I came up again I heard loud tones.

"Master Edmond, I shall tell your mamma of you. Have done immediately. What a naughty boy you are! Don't you see you have knocked all the paint off the banisters?"

Nurse was standing on the first landing, looking down into the hall with a very red face, while the child in her arms had a very inquiring look in his brown eyes, and was mouthing and tugging at an India rubber ring held by two fat slippery hands.

The delinquent was Master Edmond, aged six, who was consoling himself for the parting with the old rocking horse, by racing up and down the first flight of steps, Uncle Davy's staff in hand, rattling the round handle all the way against the banisters.

"There!" screamed nurse. "What have you done now?" as the child missed his footing, and lay screaming on the ground. She hurried down until the lusty roars reassured her, when she commenced a nursery mode of consolation. "There, have done, will you? It's all your own fault, you naughty boy. Just see how you've dirtied your clean pinafore, and now you are making baby cry. Get up."

Edmund scrambled up by aid of her great red hand, but only to reveal a slit in his frock and Uncle Davy's staff on the floor, broken in two. Nurse shook him. "Do you know what you have done? Where did you get that stick from?" "It's only Master Edmond, always in mischief, ma'am," she added in explanation, as I joined them.

I wiped the child's eyes, and pitied him for a bad bump on his forehead, supposing him to have been sufficiently punished. He picked up the two pieces of the staff, and I took them from him and carried them up stairs to my room.

Something dropped with a slight rattle on the floor, and I stopped to look at what it was, my hand stealing to my throat to assure itself of the safety of the brooch in my collar. Something that looked like a diamond was on the carpet, and I picked it up. A similar rattle, and I again found the same thing. I looked to see where they came from.

The staff was in my hand, and I turned it over. The broken end showed a perforated hole, from which as I shook it came another diamond. I gave a little exclamation, and ran down to my husband in the library. A light was dawning on me. We examined the staff, and I found it was even as we expected. The old man had been more successful in his Indian enterprises than he had given us to understand, but fearing poverty, [illegible] for penuriousness, he pretended extreme misfortune, diligently converting all that he was able to accumulate into diamonds, which he concealed in this favorite staff, never allowing it to leave his side, and guarding it with jealous and miserly care. He had evidently intended to acquaint me with the secret when on his death bed, as I remembered his reference to the children, but had died in the attempt.

But even now the discovery was not too late. Ronald at once took the diamonds to London, and was perfectly astonished by the large offers that were made for them. They realized a very large sum—sufficient to release us from our present embarrassment, and lay by a handsome portion for each of the children.

"Truly," as my husband said, with a glow in his face, when we again assembled in the Turton drawing room, "no good action goes unrewarded. We made an unselfish sacrifice for a poor man without a thought of recompense, and the blessing has returned sevenfold to our bosoms. Depend upon it, it is ever so. Where we give we shall ever be repaid—if not here, at a Higher Account."

TWO SOLILOQUIES

HE.
No look she deigned for a token
To bid my hope be spoken;
For aye the portal oaken
Hath shut my love from me.

SHE.
How could I take for granted
The love of any man?
If he to speak be daunted,
The maiden never can.

HE.
Ah! had she but given
The sign for which I've striven,
No need we should be riven
Apart, my love and I.

SHE.
Had he but half read rightly
The signs that never deceive,
No need my heart should lightly
Be worn upon my sleeve.

HE.
Should fate bring us together
Once more, again to sever,
At least I'll know whether
My love rejects me.

SHE.
Should my faint-hearted lover
His olden steps retread,
He may perchance discover
Why I have never wed.

WORK OF FASHIONABLE WOMEN

An article in the New York Times has a good word for the fashionable women of American cities, and especially of the metropolis. It maintains that only shallow observers suppose that they live for indolence, ease and modish dissipation, and that it is not true to say that they spend their days and nights for vanity and ostentation alone. Usually the fashionable woman, the writer declares, is the reverse of such presentation, and these good words are added:

So far from being idle or frivolous she is in nineteen cases out of twenty occupied in the best work she can find. She may be said to pass a large part of her life in the practice of benevolence and charity. She labors as few men labor; she taxes her strength to the utmost; she visits unpleasant places, and tries to help people from whom she would instinctively shrink. It would be hard to mention a woman of culture and refinement in easy circumstances, capable of commanding money and her time—and this is the ordinary significance of fashionable women—who is not an active member of several eleemosynary societies and an industrious worker in the field of philanthropy. No one knows who has not given attention to the matter, or been in some way associated with them, how much our women holding the best social position, whether rich or simply comfortable, undertake from day to day, and how much real good they do which but for them would be left undone. They are by no means half hearted or perfunctory in their kind offices; they are entirely in sympathy with their work; they are strictly conscientious, zealous, efficient, and their labors produce excellent fruit. Nor do they as a rule consecrate themselves, as is often supposed, to the amelioration of Borioboola Gha and other visionary schemes. They seek and find any number of heathen on Manhattan Island, dwelling in dirt and ignorance and evil because of these, and they try hard to make them clean and intelligent, and so bring them to the light.

In all the city charities—and no capital has more of these and better—they have part, and perform their part earnestly and faithfully. In fact many of the charities could not be sustained or conducted without the energetic co-operation of the very women who are painted as continental sluggards and sheer pleasure hunters. Women do a vast deal that men won't and can't do. They have, or rather take, more time; they are quicker to discern and feel; their sympathies are larger and livelier; they are the true almoners, the gentle ministers who help and never hurt. Our fashionable women seldom tell where they go and what they do.

Men know far less of woman than they commonly imagine. What they observe they think to be her all. They see her elegantly dressed, talking commonplaces, absorbed apparently in trifles; they encounter her at the theater or opera, in the drawing room or on the promenade. She is so well fitted to her surroundings, and so delicate and dainty, also, that they fancy there is no background to the picture. The fashionable woman of New York is no ascetic or parader. When she quits the slums or quarters from the squalid and dreary tenement house to which her generous heart has impelled her, she is not eloquent of the woes she has witnessed or of the antipathy she has repressed. She regains herself in her proper atmosphere. She represents society once more. To-morrow she returns to her poor and suffering, and the consciousness that she can aid does aid them renders her service gracious and grateful.

The Colossal Monopoly.

[From the Philadelphia Record.]

How long will the government submit to being systematically robbed by the Union Pacific railroad monopoly? The company last year obtained a profit of about 50 per cent of the gross earnings of $17 000 000, and yet refused to reduce the debt of $86 000 000 due to the government. It is about time congress took some definite action to compel the monopoly to disgorge.

"My dear," said a wife to her husband, "I really think it is time we had a greenhouse." "Well, my love, paint it any color you please—red, white or green will suit me," responded the husband.

CANADA'S GOVERNOR-GENERAL

The people of the Dominion seem happy in the prospect of quasi vice royalty which Lord Beaconsfield has considerately provided for them. And judging from the following account of Lorne's position about the queen's court, which we take from London correspondence of the New York Tribune, the appointment should be a welcome thing to him also:

The appointment gives Lord Lorne the first chance he has had since he married the queen's daughter. He knew then, I suppose, that he was sacrificing his political career at home—his political independence was a luxury which the queen's son-in-law could hardly hope to enjoy. He has retained the seat in the house of commons to which he was elected as a liberal, but there have been many questions on which his votes have not been liberal. His chief, or his party, rejected him—fairly or unfairly—on the suspicion of voting more as the court wished than as the son of a great whig chief. I never could understand why the Duke of Argyll should have consented to the political extinguishment of his heir. The Duke is one of the proudest nobles in Europe. He is also one of the ablest and one of the most liberal in the little band of whig peers which formed so great a part of the strength of Mr. Gladstone's administration. He would naturally have looked to his son to continue the political traditions of the house of MacCallum More. He looked to him in any case as the representative of the house, yet he must have known that his marriage with a princess brought him into an equivocal position. I shall never forget the spectacle I saw at the opening of the Albert Hall. The duke was then in office, and in company with his colleagues occupied a box in the grand tier set apart for cabinet ministers. He took down [illegible] of the procession which entered the hall, headed by the queen, who was followed by the members of her family and other great personages. The prince and princess of Wales, the duke of Edinburgh and the princess Louise came next after majesty itself. The princess Louise was already marchioness of Lorne. The wedding had been solemnized but three days before. Where was her husband? Not with her, nor near her. Etiquette did not permit him to walk by her side. He came far in the rear, lost in a crowd of royal attendants, with the goldsticks in waiting and grooms of the chamber. What must the duke of Argyll have felt as he beheld the pageant, and remarked the almost ignominious position assigned to his son? It was the same when the royal party returned up the aisle and took their places. The queen, the princess of Wales and the princess Louise sat in the front seat of the royal box. The marquis of Lorne was in the back seat, not of that, but of the next box. It has been so ever since. At the queen's drawing room it was a question whether he could remain in the same room with his wife. He was neither of the royal family nor of the royal household, nor a diplomatist, and a man must belong to one of these three categories in order to have a right to remain near the queen's person during the ceremony of reception.

In sending him to Canada as governor general, Lord Beaconsfield has really done Lord Lorne the greatest favor he could do him. He has relieved him from the burdens of the iron bound etiquette which weighed him down at home. As governor general he is the personal representative of the crown, and takes rank at last—so I am told—above his wife. At the same time her royal [illegible] makes the appointment a more brilliant one, and more welcome to that loyal people, the Canadians. All the good things that have been said of the Princess Louise have been well said. She is a woman of unusual force of character—as her story to those who know it proves—pretty, accomplished and amiable. In no sense is she responsible for whatever irksomeness may have accrued to her husband from his marriage. He too is credited with good ability, and though he has to follow Lord Dufferin, his friends believe that he will prove himself equal to the task laid upon him. Imperialism is just now in fashion. The Marquis of Lorne and his Princess may make it not only fashionable but popular in one of the most important dominions of the crown.

STUFF AND NONSENSE

One codfish yields 1 000 000 eggs. This is what keeps up the aristocracy.

The Hawkeye tells of a region where sand is so scarce that the people are obliged to boil up new maple sugar for building purposes.

"Always pay as you go," said an old man to his nephew. "But, uncle, suppose I haven't anything to pay with?" "Then don't go."

A writer who wanted his boots blacked said to his host on retiring: "I'll put my boots outside the door of my room," to which the host naively replied: "All right, nobody will touch them."

The name of the phonograph in German is unergehausnekeitungenternsteha[illegible]ftench tanngesprecher. When you wind that up on the cylinder and leave it till it gets cold, and then grind it out, it usually tears the machine to pieces and strikes the house with lightning.

A John Bull conversing with a Canadian Indian, asked him if he knew that the sun never sets on the queen's dominions. "No," said the Indian. "Do you know the reason why?" asked John. "Because heaven is afraid to trust an Englishman in the dark," was the savage's reply.

"That's a very stupid brute of yours, John," said a Scottish minister to his parishioner, the peat dealer, who drove his merchandise from door to door in a small cart drawn by a donkey. "I never see you but the creature is braying." "Ah, sir," said the peat dealer, "ye ken the heart's warm when friends meet."

LONG AGO

The bark sails slowly over sunless seas,
The coasts of youth long faded out of sight,
The gleam that lingered on the last dear height
Lost as we drift before life's steady breeze.
Yet as the ship glides onward, fair green leas
And wood-crowned uplands bathed in mystic light
Show on an isle set in the moonbeams white,
Or blush of sunrise. Glad we steer for these.
The mirage pales, the mists close thick again,
We see the great gray waves and nothing more,
And listen with a yearning useless pain
To hear the soft waves whisper on the shore,
Shore of the happy land we used to know,
Never trodden twice in life, the Long Ago.
—All the Year Round.

"Masterly Inactivity."

[From the London World.]

This phrase with inverted commas has been going the round of the newspapers for some time now, and has of late been so constantly quoted by the Times in reference to Lord Lawrence's pusillanimous suggestions that ordinary readers may imagine that it owes its origin to him. I am open to correction, but I believe the expression will be found for the first time in Vindiciae Gallicae of Sir James Mackintosh. "The commons, faithful to their system, remained in a wise and masterly inactivity." Daniel Webster adopted it in rebuking the ardor of the party who wished to take advantage of the Papineau rebellion in 1837 to annex Canada to the great republic. His argument was that sooner or later Canada must be absorbed in the natural course of events, but the policy of America was not to hasten the event by war with Great Britain, but to bide her time in masterly inactivity.

The People Sounder than their Leaders.

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel.]

Among the results of the recent election it is found that more than half the Republican members of congress who voted to repeal the resumption act failed to secure re-election. This clearly indicates that the Republican voters are sounder on financial questions than their representatives were, but they should have made a clean sweep while they were about it.

THE NEW SOUTHERN QUESTION

[From the New York Times

last of his many admirable campaign Mr Blaine touched, briefly but sug the new southern question or as might call it the new aspect of the old He referred to the absence of criticism of the question as before the action of the Hayes admin or of the issue which that action at seemed likely to raise as betwee of the Republican party He to the disposition everywhere man during the Republican canvass to former causes of irritation and to discussion to financial topics And refusal of the south also to banish from its politics and to recogni faith the right of the colored popula the free expression of their preferen the canvass and at the polls he found of a new controversy which will more to solidify the north in sup of a demand for the enforcement of rights. As he defines it, the contro will derive fresh bitterness from the the south practically annuls the en ment of the freedmen while exer the enlarged representative power in which the enfranchisement con

There can be no doubt that the Maine sen expresses the feeling prevalent all classes of Republicans since the situation became understood The of silence with regard to the south and other Republican leaders hon maintained during the canvass was to forced upon them At the out own inclination favored a different They might not have assailed the but they would have spoken the effect of the president's meas of the defiant tone even then dis southern speakers and writers The judgment of the party was agains Leaving the merits of the pres proceeding to be estimated by each himself, the great body of the par disposition to revive a dispute would not produce any immediate ben would certainly create internal dis This view was accepted by most of The financial question was precedence over everything and such to the south as did occur were incidental The north was willing to be bygones It had not admired in which what is known as the of conciliation originated, but it was desirous of seeing reconciliation about Promises had been made waited patiently for their fulfillment response to the appeal of afflicted cities some of its characteristics from the that lingering animosities would and that sympathy in a period of would teach the south how ready is to forget the feuds that have di the sections. The canvass was con in this temper with a hope that the people would rebuke the violence of politicians and conduct the election satisfactorily

the result satisfactory? Mr Blaine The Republican party can answer in way Its friendly overtures have not reciprocated It kept the old southern out of the canvass and the south its appreciation of the circum by conducting a strictly sectional can by avowing pretensions to which the cannot submit, and by so pursuing its as to inflict cruel wrong upon five of colored people. The north to banish sectionalism from politics, south avails itself of the opportun a sectional right to rule, and that the rule it proposes to exercise the destruction of the essential of citizenship as possessed by the The result of the tactics to Mr Blaine somewhat reluctantly is, then, in every respect unsat It shows that though one phase southern question has disappeared has grown out of the southern of the canvass and the shame by which it extinguished the quarters of a million of colored The impossible task of revising the is not thought of But the overrates its power, and mis the spirit of the north, if it im the condition of things just de in South Carolina, in Louisiana other states will be allowed to The outrages by which the south solidity, are not confined in to the colored people They political equality which should between north and south, and raise which can have only one end

however, as Mr Blaine's inquiry cast a doubt upon the sagacity a Republican policy of silence now over, we think that he is We will not speak of the effect prominent presentation of the old question would have had in divid the party, and diverting attention from financial controversy Mr Blaine's no in behalf of a sound financial system his own estimate of its importance and to concentrate public opinion upon the dominating topic of the day But from these considerations, it is clear as a consequence of its non sectional at in the canvass, the Republican party better prepared to grapple with the involved in the new aspect of the question. Had it assailed the south the latter was upon its trial—had it pre the whole case by conducting the can the hypothesis that the south would and fraud for the attainment of its the party would have incurred the of precipitancy and unfairness have been accused of striving to the sectional alienation and irrita it professes to deplore These are not possible now. The party will not say hopefully but with a not to judge in advance of impressed sectionalism in its own It asked nothing from the South acknowledgement of the privileges voters Its tone was moderate just These characteristics add strength of its present position, impart force to its demand for a shall secure to millions of peo South the equality and freedom them

Lets Down on Tilden at Last

[New York Telegram, 12th.]

Tilden had no warmer advocate of 1876 nor his claims to the more steadfast champion, than York Sun That journal upheld living force in politics for days after exposes. It said on the morning Tilden published his explanatory it believed he would clear his every imputation of wrong. Next published the letter without a comment, and it has hardly printed name till to-day, when it gives and speaks with no uncertain his political future. The Sun says, While we should be ashamed Tilden's personal integrity, we are yet that it is proved and ad through the publication of the cipher that during his presidential cam suffered a clique of politically-im people to surround him, to act for him, compromise him. We knew at the that some of these persons were pro foolish, and we denounce them for it now appears that this their worst endowment. At any rate, have proved themselves able to fatally that they could never have built up, could never create any with the extraordinary confidence mischief was They have sufficed to damage the character for a lifetime and they have wrought a deplorable mischief to the course of public affairs Mr Tilden will not again be the presidential candidate of any party

THE WOOL GATHERING PARTY

A CURIATIC ACID EDITORIAL ON THE DEMOCRATIC REFORMERS

From the Chicago Times Nov

That which goes by the name of Democratic party may be likened unto the individual that went out to gather wool and came back shorn

For every practical purpose a party in this country consists in the party managers in the men who seek the offices the party is organized to get who declare the party purposes and give direction to the party activities Standing in the relation of interlocutor there are the men who announce what the party will do for the country if the people will only put their trust in it (the managers) and place it (the managers) in power in the offices the managers seek to hold)

Bourbons by nature who never learn anything and never forget anything the managers of the old graveyard party concern cannot forget that they or their predecessors of the same party designation once enjoyed the spoils of office cannot forget that their guiding maxim was the spoils belong to the victors cannot forget that anything to get office is the rule by which the managers of that party name have always proceeded in pursuing their grand party aim—the spoils By this rule they have been acting ever since their expulsion from the official flesh pots in 1860 In 1864 when the country was weary of war and despondent over the dark look ahead they went out to gather wool by the proposition to compromise the national dignity and honor by making peace with an enemy in arms They came back shorn In 1868 they went out to gather wool by the proposition to repudiate the national obligations contracted on account of the war then brought to a successful issue They came back shorn In 1872 they went out to gather wool, thinly disguised in Dr Greeley's old papa government overcoat, which for a quarter of a century they had anathematized with furious vehemence They came back shorn In 1876 they went out to gather wool in a reform craft warranted to sail in two opposit directions at the same time with the great cipher reformer to steer toward honest money and the demagogue of Hoosierdom to steer toward sham money They came back shorn With all these lessons of experience before them they still were incapable of learning anything or forgetting anything Still they clung to party rule, anything to get office Observing that some lunatics and idiots were making a great outcry for the production of wealth out of nothing by legislative enactment and fancying that the American people were mostly idiots or soon to become idiots they went out to gather wool by the knavish cry for the perpetuation and extension of a flagitious scheme of government swindling Again they have come back shorn The result of the November ballot boxing has left them scattered over the wide field of contest from ocean to ocean fleeceless scalpless pitiful objects of the highest contempt honest men can feel for political knavery and folly They persisted in acting like men combining the character of knaves and fools and have again met the just reward that, sooner or later knaves and fools must receive

Though that which goes by the name of Democratic party will continue to assert itself as a majority in the national congress opposed to the administration it is an opposition without vitality save as a mode of personal hostility to officeholders whose places its leaders seek to get As an opposition to the resumption policy of the government as an opposition proposing the silly and villainous programme of a fiat greenback currency it is no longer threatening or formidable As a sham money party the Democrat combination of office-seekers has reached the end of its rope Like the fraud programme the sham money programme is played out The party chiefs that have been traveling that road in the hope that it would bring them to the spoils are compelled to perceive that the country will not follow them in that direction

What new course will they take What new leaders bring to the front to replace the fiat money humbugs that have been shorn in the latest wool gathering? In what direction will the Democracy go out wool gathering next?

BALLOT-BOXING IN SOUTH CAROLINA

THOUSANDS OF DEMOCRATIC BALLOTS STUFFED INTO THE BOXES IN THE CHARLESTON DISTRICT —MORE VOTES COUNTED THAN THERE ARE VOTERS—TINY TISSUE BALLOTS USED THROUGHOUT THE STATE FOR FRAUDULENT PURPOSES

WASHINGTON Nov 10—Ex Congressman Mackey who was the Republican candidate for congress on Tuesday last in the Charleston (S C) district has written a letter to a gentleman of this city, in which he describes the methods adopted by the Democrats to make that state solid Mr Mackey after describing numerous instances of violence practiced upon Republicans says

The most outrageous cases of ballot box stuffing occurred at the two polls in ward three of Charleston At the Palmetto engine house poll No 1, of the Democratic managers W L Daggett foreman of the News and Courier job printing office stuffed 2 500 false tickets in the box after the poll was closed The managers finding that there were 3 560 ballots in the box, declined to throw out any but counted them all and returned the vote of that poll as 461 for Mackey and 3,108 for O Connor At the other poll in this ward the same act was performed and its managers returned 121 for Mackey and 1 805 for O Connor so that one ward out of the eight in the city was made to give a majority of 4 392 votes for O Connor The utter impossibility of voting 3 569 persons at one poll in the space of 12 hours needs hardly to be argued As the managers swore each voter separately and in many cases consumed 5 to 1 minutes questioning some voters it is safe to say that the average time consumed in voting each man was one minute which would allow 720 vote to be polled provided there was a continuous stream of voters during the 12 hours the polls were opened Yet at this poll the managers made a return under oath that 3 560 persons voted in the space of 12 hours By this method Charleston City is made to give O Connor a majority of 6 527, or a majority larger than the entire Democratic vote of the city Throughout this county and the district the boxes were stuffed in the same way —not only in Charleston but in Clarendon Not satisfied with stuffing the ballot boxes the Democrats, finding it impossible to stuff the ballot-box at the Washington engine house, in Ward 6 because of the vigilance of the U S supervisor, put out the lights and stole the box and destroyed it because I had a majority of about 500 there On Edisto Island where 1 000 Republican voters reside and where the Democrats have only about 40 or 50 votes, the Democratic commissioners failed to open the polls, thus actually disfranchising those voters

[Special Dispatch to the New York Times]

COLUMBIA, Nov 10,—The frauds perpetrated in this state stagger belief In all the counties where there was opposition the Democrats voted a diminutive tissue ballot inclosed generally in a larger one They were voted in batches I have heard two men confess to voting respectively, 18 and 20 of them In some boxes there were four times as many votes as there were voters in the precinct In others the excess of votes over voters was withdrawn by a blindfolded man, who almost invariably took out the Republican tickets. In this county the Republicans voted more solidly than in 1876, when the majority was over 1 500 Republican. This time it is 2,890 Democratic, (more than the number of Democratic voters) Stuffing was resorted to as a pastime, and carried beyond all bounds of necessity Everybody is laughing about it, and no attempt to deny or conceal the fraud is made, except in the newspapers The tissue paper tickets are general throughout Republican counties showing that the scheme emanated from headquarters

Supervisors and deputy marshals were kept away from the count This sort of fraud beats murder violence or intimidation

How we Were Swindled, and Our Revenge.

Col Forney's new weekly journal Progress has the following on the manner in which we were swindled by the fishery award and our method of getting even

On the 23d inst the $5 500 000 will be due which the umpire under the Washington treaty decided that the U S should pay to Great Britain for certain rights secured to our fishermen on the banks of Newfoundland The award was so excessive that even the English received it and the London Times noticed it as a magnificently monstrous reprisal But the decree stands and the only way out of it is to pay and be done with it We ought to be as much ashamed of disputing the award as the English would be ashamed to take the money A gentleman who plays at cards with an unscrupulous adversary gets no sympathy by alleging that he has been cheated when he has lost

And just here it cannot hurt anybody to state that the English governing classes are rather rejoiced at our ill temper over this swindling award All the old dislike of America in England has been revived by recent events Even the original cause of our separation which was fading out is reappearing in darker lines The utter failure of free trade the growing balance of trade in our favor the superiority of our manufactures and the success of our inventions may be cited as some of the causes for this renewed bad temper and the award in the fishery case only serves to bring them out more prominently We hope the president will pay the five millions and a half promptly on the day fixed, and be done with it We agreed to the arbiter and we must abide his judgment

Well sir we will lay a duty on your productions as an offset, if you wont consent to reduce your high tariff? said a belligerent Englishman full of these truths to us some weeks ago Answer Why do you not try it? Suppose you begin now? But you cannot do without our cotton grain gold cheese and beef any more than you can do without your own air, or water or beer and as we want nothing from you in exchange we will just take your gold Exit John Bull It is true that the British privileged classes have no longer any love for the United States It never was more than skin deep

The "World's" Comments

The New York World (Dem) prints a list of states which have voted Republican this year and its opposite a list of those which have voted Democratic and footing up the columns it finds that the Republicans would have 20 electoral votes and the Democrats 156 and it significantly says

If the foregoing signifies anything does it not indicate that the Tilden managers had better abandon for the present the electoral commission business and the fraud cry and assaults on Democrats who voted for the electoral commission in spite of the advice of the World to keep clear of it? The cipher scandals have for the moment taken both sting and terror out of the fraud yell and the sooner Democrats see it the better will it be for them The money question and the taxation issue including the tariff and the reduction of government expenditures, are now the only national topics about which sensible and patriotic men and women can be rationally interested

Shakespeare Proverbs and Douglas Jerrold

Mary Cowden Clarke's Shakespeare Proverbs or The Wise Saws of our Wisest Poet Collected into a Modern Instance, was dedicated to Douglas Jerrold, who afterward wrote Mrs Clarke a characteristic note The dedication was as follows To Douglas Jerrold the first wit of the present age these proverbs of Shakespeare the first wit of any age are inscribed by Mary Cowden Clarke of a certain age, and no wit at all —and the note in p r You must imagine that all this time I have been endeavoring to regain my breath, taken away by your too partial dedication To find my name on such a page and in such company I feel like sacrilegious knave who has broken into a church and is making off with the communion plate I feel that I ought never to speak or write again but go down to the grave with my thumb in my mouth

On Friday last the county court and Mr Dale's bondsmen met in Lafayette for the purpose of adjusting matters, if possible in regard to Dale's delinquency and after considerable parley a settlement was effected by the court agreeing to accept $ 000 The amount for which the county brought suit against the bondsmen was $17 000 which if interest be computed would bring it somewhere near the sum of $19 000 The bondsmen therefore pay but a little over one third of the amount charged against them

Wm Bybee and Isaac Irwin have recently purchased the placer diggings of Henry Wines, at the head of Jump-off-Joe creek and will put up a small hydraulic on them this winter. A ditch one mile in length is now being brought in and will afford enough water for the present, though it is proposed to extend it some further hereafter.

One very comical incident is reported A man who had a deposit in the local branch of a Manchester bank hastily withdrew the amount and posted to Manchester, where he deposited it in the head office of the same bank His explanation was that he thought the small banks would "go first"

Thanksgiving Day in California

SAN FRANCISCO Nov 29—Thanksgiving Day was very generally observed as a feast day. Business was almost entirely suspended. Services were held in all the churches. In the morning a great number of sporting attractions were offered including boat races, lacrosse games, bicycle race on the Cliff road, shooting matches etc. Social gatherings wound up the day. Dispatches from the interior show that the day was generally observed as a holiday throughout the state.

Duncan on Trial.

SAN FRANCISCO Nov 29—J C Duncan was placed on trial in the municipal criminal court to day.

LATER—In the trial of J C Duncan the empanelment of a jury was not completed this afternoon and the case was continued till Monday. The real cause of postponement is the fact that an error has been found in the indictment. The mistake occurred in copying a certificate of Safe Deposit stock on which the case was founded. To avoid giving the prisoner's counsel an opportunity to demand the quashing of the indictment on the completion of the panel and presentation of the case the trial will be commenced Monday on another indictment and the defective one returned to the grand jury.

That Crosscut Swindle

It is very difficult to obtain reliable news from the Sierra Nevada crosscut now, as miners are forbidden on penalty of discharge to give information and no one is admitted to the mine. As far as can be learned the crosscut is in ore mixed with a vein of porphyry. A crosscut from the north end of the drift on the 2900 foot level is about 50 or 60 feet north of the first crosscut, making good headway and is expected to strike at ore body next Wednesday or Thursday.

Saville's Trial.

The case of the English forger Saville came up in the police court this morning. Lucky Baldwin took the witness stand and testified to the circumstances under which he bought stocks for the prisoner taking as security a forged letter of credit on the Union Bank of London. The testimony added nothing of importance to the account heretofore telegraphed.

Suicide.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 29—Thomas Toorack, a German laborer of about fifty four years of age committed suicide last night by hanging himself with a piece of hayrope from the balcony of a two story lodging house at No 25 Minna street.

Paintings by Old Masters.

Detective James R Rogers yesterday recovered from the baggage room of the Brooklyn hotel eight paintings which F Bernardo Gregor of Durango Mexico claims are works of old masters and worth $300 000. The pictures were left with the proprietor of the hotel about two years ago for safe keeping by C W Cahalan.

Ellie Wilton's Case and the Austin Estate

SAN FRANCISCO Nov 29—To day was set for the hearing of the case involving the right to the possession of certain life insurance policies issued to the late Alexander Austin and supposed to be at present in the hands of Miss Ellie Wilton. Besides the policies the public administrator called upon her to show cause why she should not deliver up other property believed to be in her possession and belonging to Austin's estate. The hearing was in the chambers of Judge Myrick, and the attorneys on each side decided that it was best that there should be no publicity. It has been ascertained by Public Administrator Doolan that Austin, a few days before his death, borrowed various sums of money from personal friends, in all about $12 000. Where this money went to has not been discovered. It is the opinion of Mr Doolan that Austin was subjected to some terrible pressure of some kind which rendered the immediate raising of the above amount of money necessary and the discovery of his necessities at that time may throw some light upon his motive for committing suicide when he did. The persons who loaned this money to Austin will make no claim against the estate being very unwilling that their names should figure in the case. Mr Doolan has informed the firm of J M Walker & Co that Austin's seat in the stock board would be considered the property of the firm.

Incendiary Fire.

A fire occurred in an unoccupied building in Oakland this morning; loss $4 300; attributed to tramps who set it on fire in revenge for having been ousted from it by the proprietor.

Fire in Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO Nov 28—A fire occurred at 4 o'clock this morning in the planing mill of Taft Totman & Farnsworth, on L street, just south of Fifth. One quarter of the block was burned. The property destroyed was mostly wooden and old buildings, and but two valuable houses suffered. The loss will aggregate about $18 000.

Rarus Wins.

MARYSVILLE, Nov 28—The second day's races at the park drew a much larger attendance than yesterday to witness the match between Rarus and Sweetzer for a special purse of $1 000, the former being the winner. Time First heat, 2 22 second, 2 17 third, 2 22.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

UNIONTOWN, Pa, Nov 29—A boiler explosion occurred near Dunbar last evening by which Richard Evans, Dan Garrison and J J Miller were instantly killed, Jos Vayon mortally, and ten others seriously injured. Most of these men were on the roof of the boiler house helping to erect a new stack when the explosion occurred.

A Rich Strike.

CALIENTE, Nov 28—A rich strike is reported in Kernville Kern county. The Sumner Gold Mining Co on their 160 foot level 55 feet south of the main shaft, have found a body of ore 10 feet thick which it is said will yield from $30 to $50 per ton.

NEVADA.

The Sierra Nevada.

VIRGINIA Nov 29—The latest from the Sierra Nevada is that streaks of porphyry are working out of the top of the crosscut and good ore coming in at the bottom.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

A Ship in Distress.

VICTORIA Nov 29—The bark Antioch which sailed from Nanaimo on the 28th of October for Ounalaska, with coal returned last night in distress having lost her rudder, bulwarks and sails. A survey will be held.

The Weather.

Snow storms have prevailed for two days but the weather is now calm with a lowering sky.

An Atlanta special: The election of Ben Hill as senator is likely to become the subject of investigation by the present assembly. The charge is that certain members of the last assembly were bribed in his interest. The matter has been more freely talked of since Governor Colquitt's investigation was commenced. A senator to day stated that he could furnish testimony which would go far to seriously implicate Senator Hill in the bargains and unless his influence strengthens it is likely that a petition for his resignation will be circulated, and he be forced to resign or his seat be declared vacant.

Small Pox in Dakota.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 29.—A malignant type of small pox is raging at Grand Forks Dakota.

A DISTRICT AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Multnomah Grange in conjunction with Multnomah Pomona Grange appointed a committee for the purpose of taking initiatory steps towards organizing a district agricultural society. At a meeting of the committee they concluded to invite prominent farmers and business men of Multnomah and adjacent counties to meet with them for the purpose of affecting such an organization. In pursuance of the above arrangements quite a large delegation from Multnomah Clackamas and Washington counties met last Tuesday November [illegible] at [illegible] hall East Portland. The meeting was called to order by Hon P Kelly, when Henry Miller of East Portland was elected chairman and A F Miller of East Portland secretary. The chairman stated the object of the meeting which there was a general expression on the subject all favoring the project and thinking a district fair of incalculable benefit to the northern counties of this valley.

A committee of five was appointed on incorporation consisting of A [illegible] of Milwaukie, J T Apperson of Oregon City, P Kelly of East Portland, E A Marquam of Portland and — [illegible] of Cornelius. Also a committee of three on grounds—P Kelly, William Kern and O [illegible] of East Portland.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again on Dec 10 at 1 o'clock P M at Grange Hall [illegible] Portland.

It is to be hoped the business men of Portland will give the committee all the encouragement they possibly can when they are called on so that when we meet again we will be able to go right ahead and prepare for a fair the coming fall.

A F MILLER Secretary

East Portland Nov 27 1878

CARD OF THANKS

With the most intimate and heartfelt feelings of gratitude the Sisters of Charity of Vancouver return thanks to Almighty God and the generous people of Vancouver for the success surpassing all expectations which attended their annual fair held for the benefit of the orphans under their care.

Although they have recently contributed over $1000 to the re erection of the St Joseph's hospital which a destructive fire reduced to ashes, yet their charitable efforts in behalf of the poor and the orphan worked prodigies and the astounding sum of $2130 has been realized. May Almighty God bless them.

The merchants and dealers of Portland deserve our special thanks for the many useful and fancy articles which they so generously contributed for the fair.

The Caecilian brass band of Holy Angels College deserves our greatest encomiums for the really excellent music which they discoursed during the three evenings. Every one was astonished at the proficiency of this young band under the masterly leadership of Prof W A Thompson who treated the attendants to the exquisite rendering of some beautiful duets for cornet and violin accompanied by the harmonium.

To the amateur musicians, who joined the college band, our most heartfelt thanks are given.

In one word may Divine Providence shower His choicest blessing on the friends of the poor orphan waif! No doubt His words will come true. Who gives to the poor lendeth unto God, and to obtain that end the prayers of 80 orphans will daily ascend before the throne of the Almighty there to do violence to God for the benefit of their benefactors.

A Oakey Hall has assumed the position of city editor of the New York World. The Tribune says this recalls Manton Marble's remark that Oakey Hall may be a very smart man, but he can never be city editor of the World! Many newspaper men to day were inclined to believe it a joke by Hall, but it is confirmed.

Stanley the African traveler, is retrieving himself in the good opinion of the English people. The London Telegraph pronounces the series of lectures he is delivering at St James Hall "intensely interesting" while the audience is delighted with the manly bearing and modesty of the lecturer.

Generally throughout the United States there is a [illegible] degree of confidence in the business situation [illegible] much more than is hoped [illegible] [illegible] and has [illegible] a very considerable prosperity. The [illegible] having made an [illegible] [illegible] good money [illegible] [illegible] intelligence of the [illegible] [illegible] argument has for long time been making [illegible] preparation for resumption [illegible] [illegible] the coin actually on hand [illegible] equal to fifty per cent of the amount out in paper [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] full confidence. Whenever [illegible] is convinced that his note can be exchanged [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in the quantity offered [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] advantage to every [illegible] [illegible] There [illegible] another point well worthy of remark after resumption shall have been proclaimed no further [illegible] of greenbacks will be made below the value of five dollars. All notes of inferior [illegible] [illegible] will be [illegible] treasury but those remaining [illegible] [illegible] be used as coin until worn out and cut for final redemption. The effect will naturally be to create a demand for silver dollars to replace [illegible] of less than five dollars and [illegible] will not only tend to appreciate the market price of silver but will enable the government to rid its groaning vaults of the silver that are now piled within them to an extent that is [illegible] burdensome.

In local financial matters the condition is somewhat improved without however affecting rates on loans either upon real estate or other classes of securities. Remittances from the interior are being made with more promptness and in greater volume than last week though some complaint is still heard on this score. The general desire among merchants to settle up all accounts at the close of the year is felt and to do so it is necessary in most cases for their customers to show the same disposition. The city banks and lending institutions are amply supplied with loanable funds and terms to borrowers are still as easy as they have been during the past half year. The call from wheat buyers upon the local money market is considerable in the aggregate but provision having been made for even a larger demand from that direction it induces no feeling of a character to embarrass other business. Rates remain at the figures prevailing in the current quotations for six months past. All securities offered are scrutinized quite as closely as ever.

There have been a fair number of merchants from the interior in the market the past few days but their purchases have not been large, most of the buying confined to holiday goods or such as are needed to fill up broken or partially depleted stocks. They generally report a moderately active trade with some drawbacks on account of the disinclination on the part of farmers to sell their wheat at current prices. This feeling that prices for wheat must advance has been strengthened the past week by the reports of serious political complications in Europe which may culminate in an extensive and protracted war in which case the wheat raisers of America expect to realize handsomely on their surplus grain. So far however, the foreign markets have shown nothing more than a slightly firmer feeling which is augmented in local circles by the receipt of orders from San Francisco for several large lots at a figure which is only possible under the very low rates for freights from this port to that. Buyers here are not unfrequently paying as high as $1 67 per cental which is claimed to be more rather than less than shippers can afford under the present condition of the Liverpool market and the rates at which several of the ships now in port were taken to load the charters having been made early in the season.

Other products than wheat have shown no important changes for some days past the demand for exportable commodities being good and the prices quoted being more readily obtained than last week.
